THE WORLD OF WOMEN

YOUR CHILDREN

What Makes Strong Men and Women?

By Olive Roberts Barton

If a mother wishes her child to become really adult in mind and character as well as body, she will start to prepare him for it when he is very young.

I do not know the figures but I am willing to wager that 80 or 90 per cent of us are not adult at all.

If we were we would be happy, no matter what came along. As it is, in our country particularly, we act like children when misfortune overtakes us. We have never learned either resourcefulness or acceptance.

Instead we have fastened our minds on "wishes" and if they don't come true we are miserable. If they do come true, we don't appreciate them, and instantly transfer our wishes toward something else. Like spoiled children we never do achieve contentment. Like spoiled children we grow bitter when they don't.

Poor Children Grow Strong.

It is true that the children of the poor, in spite of under-privilege and handicaps of every sort, usually arrive at maturity with greater self-dependence and force of character than those who are overly protected. Perhaps this lack of attention and comfort may bring them to manhood or womanhood with other unfavourable traits—that depends on the home—but that they are more mature as a class cannot be disputed.

What then are the things that a mother may avoid if she wants her son, or daughter, to develop into a forceful and reliant person later on?

She will begin quite early not to wait on him hand and foot. Children must learn to do things for themselves without grumbling. If they have to put up with a certain amount of discomfort let them. This does not mean neglect, but it does mean to encourage the state of mind that does not whine or grow resentful when attention is denied.

Pity Spoils the Child

She will set certain duties and responsibilities for them, daily tasks that train them to accept work as a matter of course. I think bought toys contribute to laziness. They are grand and necessary things but in the old days when the boy who wanted a wagon or a sled had to make it or do without, the character lesson is obvious.

She will not encourage any child ever to feel sorry for himself, even though there is every reason why he should. The child who stands disappointment well, and who takes trouble like a sport, will not be weeping on the world's shoulder when he grows up.

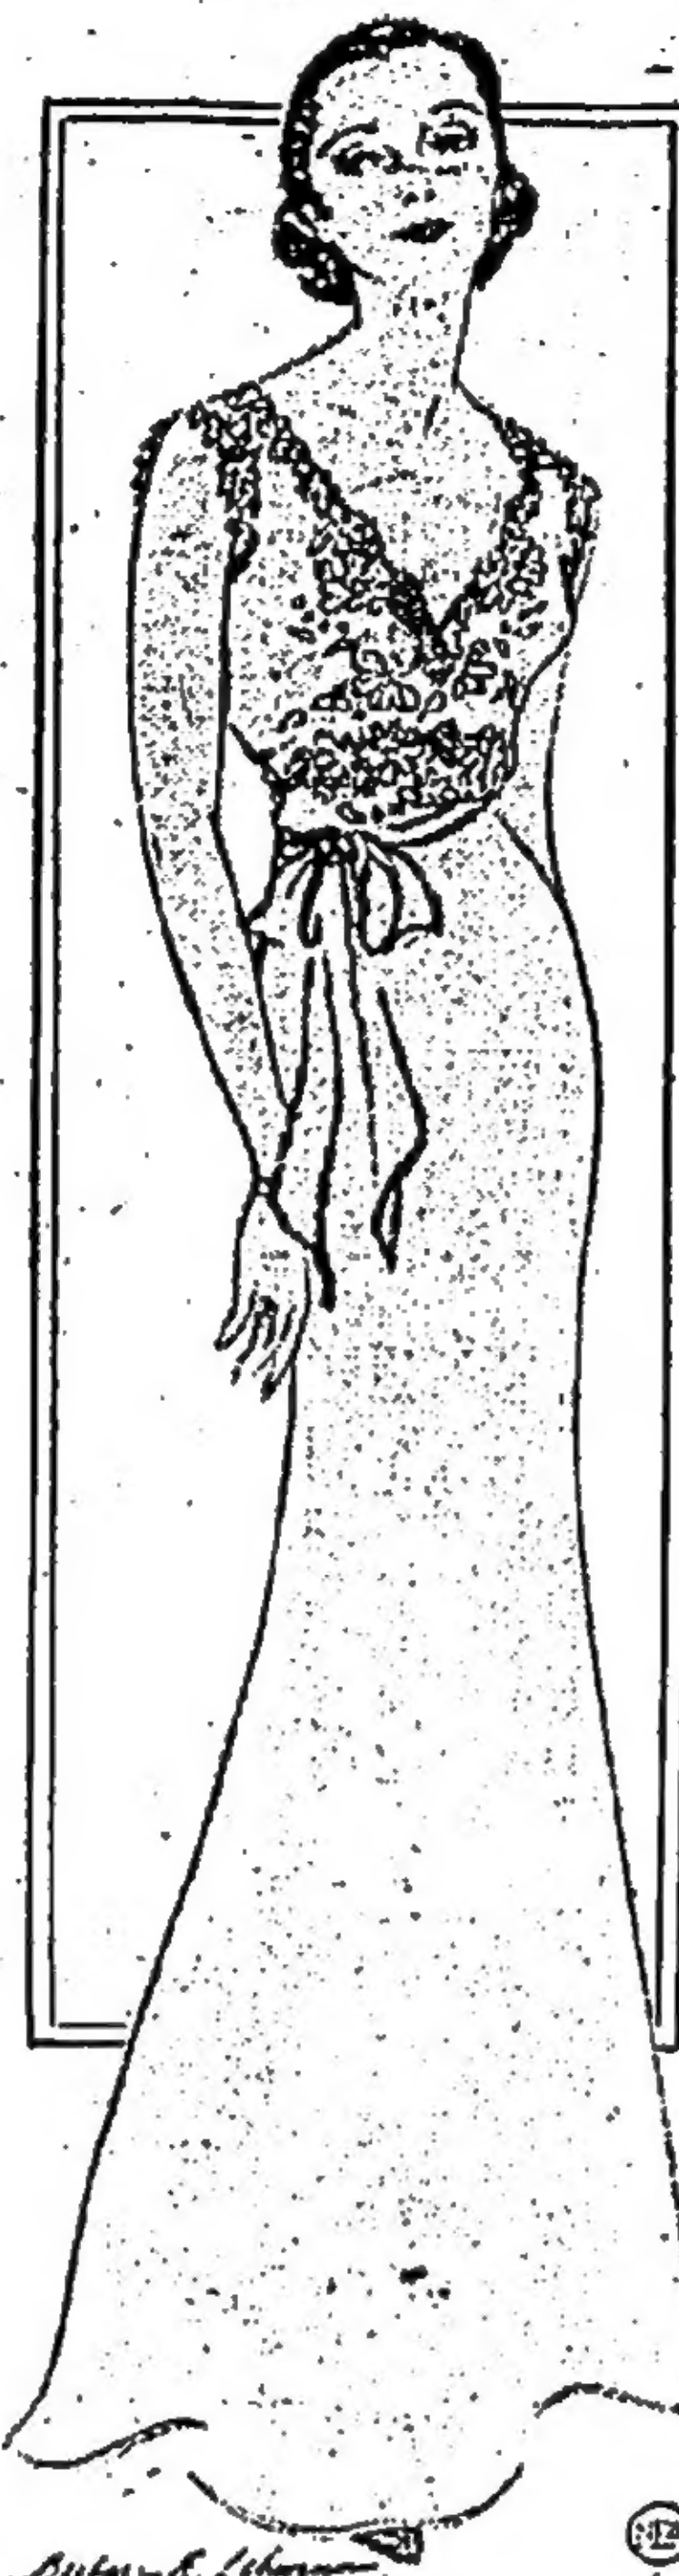

She will be kind, encouraging, happy and understanding, but she will not become either a doormat or a pillow. She will put a staff in his hand, the staff of courage, and show him the way. She won't go ahead to part the brambles. She will walk beside him and they can go the rough path together.

It is a stiff upper lip and backbone that make the adult. Coddling does the opposite. It is the overly-sheltered child who becomes helpless and complaining when mature.

For the Bride

GIFTS OF LINGERIE

—Certain, To Win Her Favour!

By Jean Savoy

If you are caught where you have to give bridal presents how about some lingerie?

No bride has the money these days to buy all the luxurious undies she craves. And you can't give any woman a more acceptable gift than hand-made French underwear.

The best thing about fine lingerie is the handsome way it fits. Slips are shaped just right and the straps are placed to stay put on your shoulders. Gowns come out in princess lines, with fullness through the skirts. And the little panties are tailored to lie flat about the hips.

The best lingerie has both exquisite lace and fine hand-embroidery. When the embroidery is done in the exact design of the lace, then you know that it's super-fine.

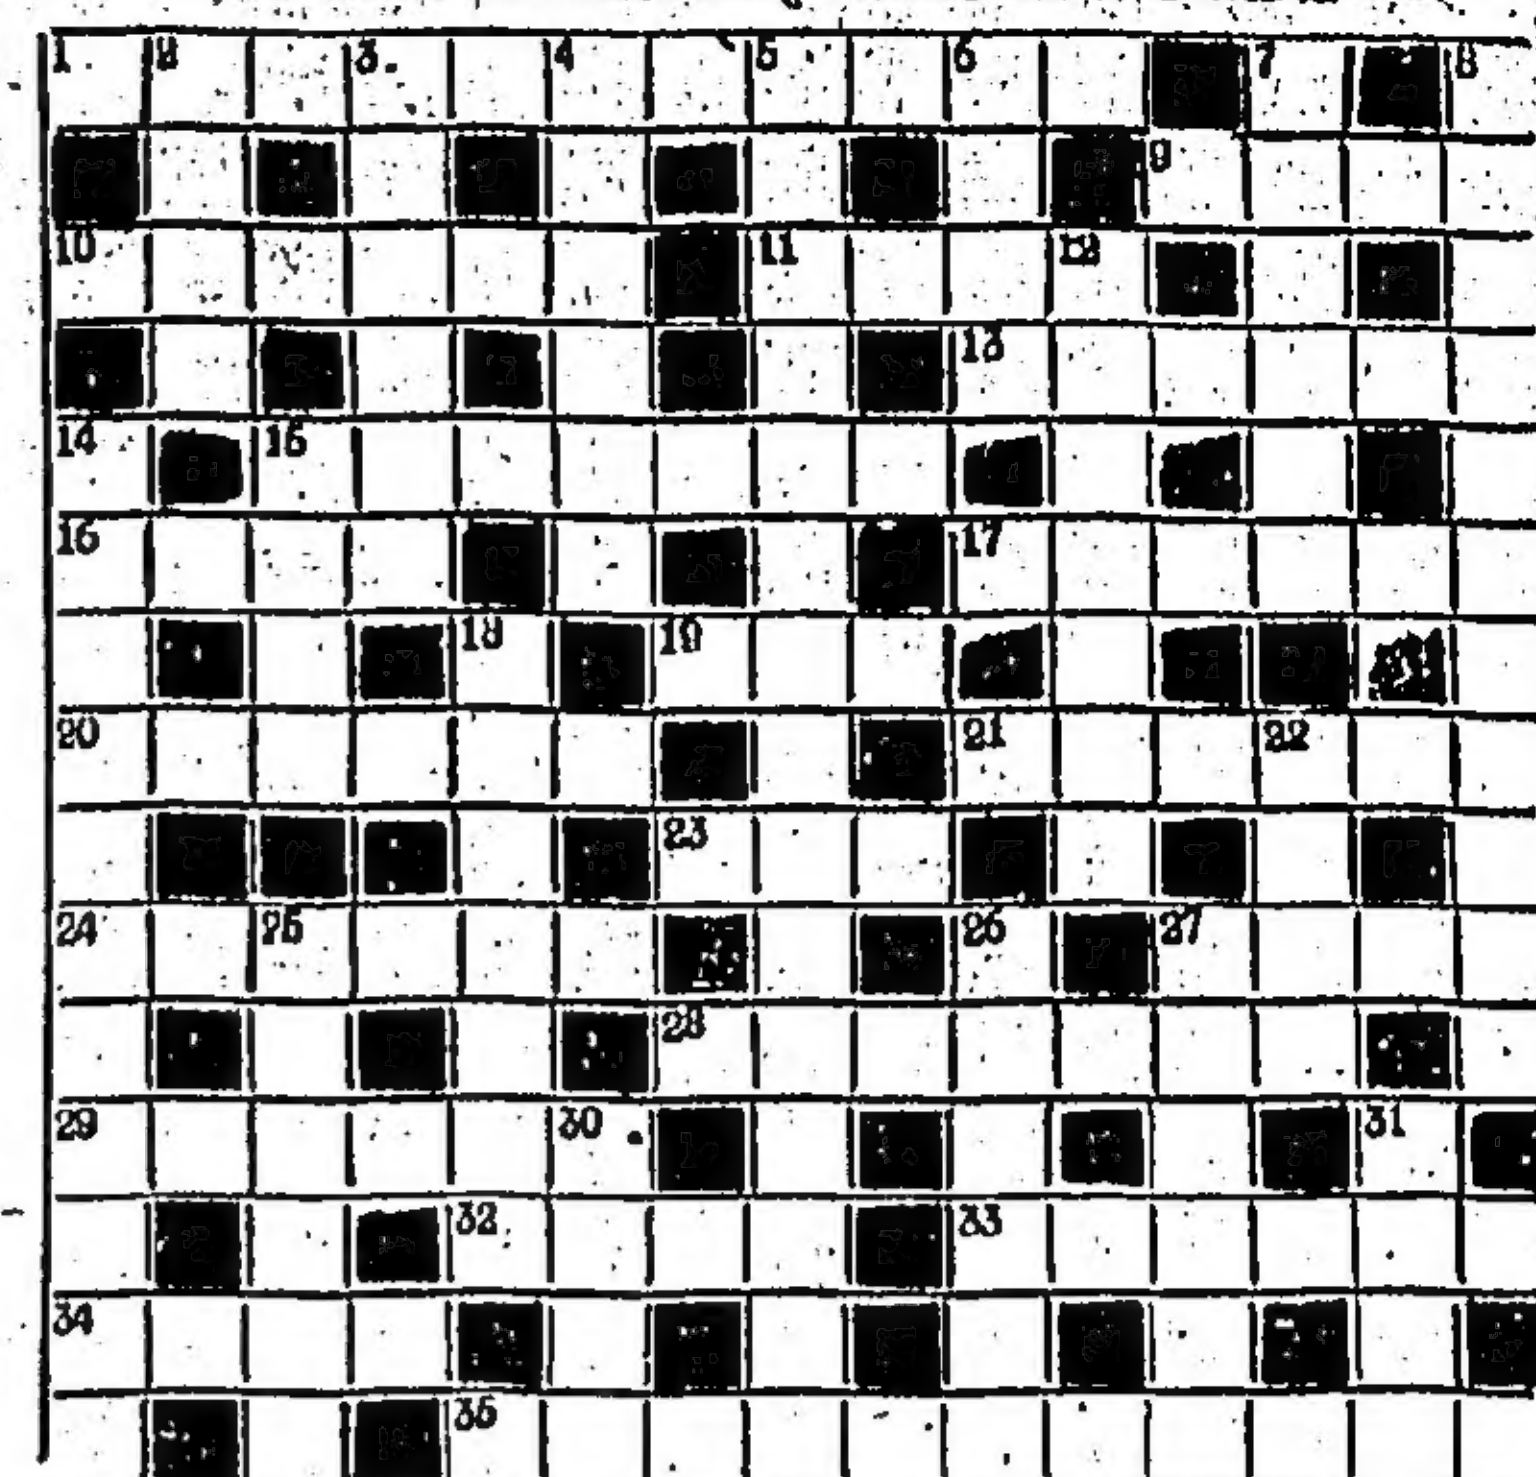

A salmon coloured fine crepe nightie has Alencon lace making a deep V yoke and shoulder arm holes. Then embroidery enriches the gown, done in the floral design of the lace. There is a little sash that ties on one side and the gown just misses the floor.

There is a little matching matinee (fancy for bed jacket) which has the lace applied to make a tiny standup back collar and revers, and all around the sleeves and outer edges, too.

A handsome white slip is very heavily trimmed in lace that makes practically all the part that shows under organdy or other sheer blouses. It is a beautifully fitting garment, with the lace running trickily around it like a bolero. A second slip has less lace adorning it, but the lace and embroidery matches the delicate green of the slip, a new colour for summer underwear.

Panties to match the white slip button up the back, fitting perfectly around the bottom and hips. There is Alencon lace and fine embroidery around the bottom of them, and in Paris manner, the bride, getting them has her initials done in fine handwork on the left side, just above the lace.

CHAPTER XXXVI

Charles' thick letter awaited Monnie at the hotel in London. Curious how her heart leaped at the sight of it. It must be, she told herself, that she expected from Charles some news of Dan. Yes, that was the reason. The square white envelope, the bold, irregular black handwriting were eloquent of Charles' personality. The letter, too, was filled with characteristic phrases.

Miss Anstee's voice aroused her. "I said, my dear, that if we are going to make the Cheshire Cheese for luncheon we'd better hurry. That must be a very fascinating letter. You've read it three times and I've been speaking to you for five minutes without getting your attention."

Monnie blushed. "Fibber! I only just finished reading it the first time."

"Well, anyhow we've got to be starting. I'm perishing for food. The Tower of London was very interesting but I'm a wreck. I said I would do all the tourist things and I'm doing them though it's hard on me."

Monnie tucked Charles' letter in the bottom of her overnight bag among her creams and brushes. He'd said he missed her—but he hadn't said a word about Dan. Gossip about home, about Kay and her mother and the boys. The Watermans had given a party on the 17th and Kay had looked lovely in some yellow thing. Kay and Charles! Well, that would be nice, too. Why did her heart suffer that queer little pang at the thought?

It was Dan whom Monnie wanted—Dan whom she loved! Pride was all very well. It sustained you sometimes but not when you were aching desperately for news of the loved one. Why hadn't Charles mentioned Dan? Probably he, like everyone else, thought Monnie had gone away to forget about Dan. Well, everyone was right—only the plan didn't work as well as she'd hoped it would.

"Coming, Miss Anstee!" Monnie crowded her small green hat, the one Miss Anstee had insisted on buying for her in that Bond street place, over her bronze curls. She looked well, she told herself critically. Quite the young-woman-about-London. A year ago if anyone had told her a single one of these fairy-tale happenings were to take place she'd have laughed at him. Well, here she was thousands of miles away from home, going to smart places, eating rich food, being fêted. Yes, fêted! Hadn't Arthur Mackenzie given a dinner party for her the night before at the Ritz? Wasn't he taking her this very evening to dine and dance at one of the new night places—the Club Cavendish or something like that?

Monnie liked Arthur Mackenzie now—wasn't afraid of him any more. Maybe his dark eyes had lost that predatory look which at first had frightened her. He played big brother to her these days. Oh, she knew he was spoiled—she could see that but it didn't matter. He was inclined to put, quite like a big baby, at the first hint of not getting his own way.

"Women have spoiled me, Monnie," he had told her, half laughing, the night before as they danced. "You're the first one who ever kept me from having my own way in all things."

That was funny, Monnie thought—funny that she, a small town girl, should be the one to humble this king of finance. What he had been speaking about in particular was her stubbornness in standing out against him when he'd wanted to buy her that fur wrap yesterday morning. He had come upon her and Miss Anstee, trailing along Bond street looking in this window and that, and had insisted on accompanying them upon the foray to buy the hat.

The mannequin in the fur wrap had strolled past them at Mackenzie's bidding. Monica had crowded softly at sight of the wrap—deep, soft fur, cuddling the thin cheeks of the blond English girl who wore it.

"Splendid for foggy weather, eh?" Mackenzie had asked with a twinkle.

"Oh, excellent for that, sir," the saleswoman had chirped, and the mannequin had given Monnie an envious sidelong glance.

"Try it on, Monnie," the man had urged under Miss Anstee's clear, critical gaze.

"Nonsense." She had been very sturdy about it. "No use making myself unhappy. I should be remembering always how it felt."

He had smiled again at that. "But I'd like you to have it. Little remembrance of this trip." Monnie had not needed to look at Miss Anstee to know that the prim little lips were pressed together even more primly. Her own conscience had risen in protest. "Sorry, I couldn't possibly—"

She had thought with a flash of amazement that the glance the mannequin gave her held something like contempt. Afterward Miss Anstee had been downright strange about it. She had said in a dimly regretful tone, "What a pity you couldn't have accepted it from him, Monnie."

At the girl's exclamation of surprise she had hastened to add, "Naturally I know you couldn't! But, after all, he's no nice, takes such an interest—and you would have looked so lovely in that. Quite dazzled Belvedere."

Monnie gave the older woman a hug. "Miss Corey, I'm surprised at you!"

"I know. I'm surprised at myself. But I guess I've got my values a bit mixed on this trip. I'm getting soft with so much luxury."

To-night Monnie was dining with Mackenzie alone. Miss Anstee was to go to the theatre with some friends who lived in a flat in Kensington Gardens and Mackenzie was to pick Monnie up at 8. At half past seven she was ready and restless. Miss Anstee, called for early by the Mr. and Mrs. Richardson from Cincinnati, had gone.

The girl strolled to and fro, picking up a magazine, laying it down again. She glanced at the Dresden clock on the mantelpiece. How restless she was! She wished Mackenzie would come. Then she wouldn't have so much time to think about home—about mother and Kay and the boys, to wonder what they were doing. She was a selfish pig to be away from them all, enjoying this luxury. She would have to make it up to them when she got back. But how?

Suddenly, like a black vista, the years yawned before Monnie. What was she going to do with her life? With Dan out of it, she seemed aimless—couldn't make plans. She'd devoted heart and soul to him, had wrapped up all her ambitions in him. This was, after all, only an interlude. She'd have to go back home to a dreary, humdrum job and make the most of it. What about her dreams of doing something splendid for her mother and the rest? She'd never be able to.

She wrapped the dark velvet cloak around her as the pleasant British voice on the telephone announced Mackenzie's arrival.

"You look lovely, as always." He was bowing over her hand. She was whisked into the inevitably luxurious motor car that always attended this man's comings and goings. A soft rug was tucked around her feet. Mackenzie spoke through a tube and the motor purred noiselessly. The car slid forward. Fog held the night without but in the small intimacy of the car the two people sat, warm and enclosed.

"You'll like this place to-night, Monica." He had a pleasant voice, she reflected. Deep and resonant. "That's one of the many things I like about you," he continued with gravity. "Your youthful enthusiasm. I've known so many jaded people—sated with life. With you everything's new."

"That's because I haven't been any place before," the girl told him without self-consciousness.

As they sat down at the candle-light table with an obsequious pair of waiters hovering in attendance, she returned his smile with one of honest liking. How nice this man had been to her! Last night at the party Corinth Farnway had said to her with a curious high laugh, "Artie's taken a great fancy to you. Make the most of it."

And when Monnie had looked at her curiously the other girl had cried, gratingly, "Oh, don't be a little fool. He's all right, Artie is."

It must be true—the gossip she'd heard—that Corinth and Mackenzie had been in love with each other although he was almost twice her age. But she was married to someone else now. It didn't seem to matter. "If I'd ever cared for anyone like that," thought Monnie, "I should hate the thought of giving him up to someone else."

Suddenly she realized that Mackenzie was studying her intently. "What is it?" he asked.

"I've a bit of news for you, Monica?"

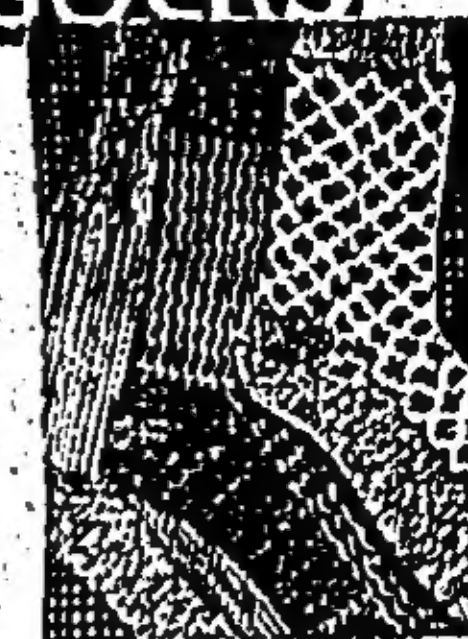

Why did her heart beat faster at the tone?

"I've got to leave to-morrow. Got a cable from the office this afternoon."

"Oh, I'm sorry!" It was true. She would miss this man and his many kindnesses. He stared at her. "Monnie, I wonder—I want you to come back with me!"

FATAL BALCONY COLLAPSE

The painstaking inquiry into the fatal balcony collapse at Yuk Sau Street terminated in a manner which can only be described as unsatisfactory and as leaving behind a number of reflections disturbing to public complacency. While a measure of reluctance can be understood, it is a matter for regret that the jury should have chosen to be non-committal when the evidence left little room for doubt as to the facts and still less for confusion. The balcony was designed and approved as a cantilevered slab, as were all others in the building. This design was comparatively new to the Colony and involved the laying of steel-work on principles basically new to the workmen and, apparently, to the foremen. Essential to the stability of these balconies was the laying of steel rods and beam stirrups at the top of the slab. In every case, they were found at the bottom, with the result that designed to carry 6,000 pounds, their strength, in the opinion of the expert witness, was precisely nothing. It was impossible to accept any theory suggesting that the rods and the stirrups found their way to the bottom by accident. The inference is that they were so placed by workmen who did not know better, or who given specific instructions regarding the laying, thought they knew better than their instructor because they had done previous jobs, of another design, differently. But because the principles were new, because there was this liability to the assumption of better knowledge by Chinese workmen and because a similarly designed balcony in the same street had collapsed earlier, a greater responsibility rested upon those who understood the importance of meticulous attention to correct laying and were expected to see that it was properly carried out before the concrete was poured. Two persons lost their lives because this was not done. The jury do suggest in their findings that measures should be taken to see that such an accident shall not occur again in consequence of a lack of proper supervision. But that is as far as they go. Let this, they say in effect, be the last of laissez faire. To our mind, the jury's findings thereby give an incomplete impression of the seriousness of the event. We can only hope that it has not also escaped the attention of those with power to exercise control.

NOTES OF THE DAY

The cabaret question takes on a new aspect in view of the uncompromising refusal of the police to modify their arbitrary curfew hour. The inference is that the authorities responsible for the decision are not amenable to reason and that the dancing establishments must find their own remedy. It is very unfortunate that some arrangement cannot be reached between the police and the proprietors, because the restrictions, insofar as they affect the city establishments, are unduly onerous and exceed all requirements. There was, for instance, more than humour behind the question asked by Robert McWhirter in the Post this morning: Where do our young lads get to of a night-time these days? We have heard much talk during the cabaret controversy regarding public morals and so forth. It might even be, contrary to most of the submissions made, that the diversion provided by cabarets could be regarded as a social asset. Meanwhile, an enquiry has been made regarding the source of the powers taken by the police to impose the curfew. It is suggested that a test case might prove interesting.

SILVER STRUGGLE

After a fortnight of concentrated effort with success apparently always looming nearer, Senator Pittman's scheme for the rehabilitation of silver has received a succession of cold douches. The hope of an agreed programme receded very definitely with the refusal of other power to promise support to the signatories of the proposed Eight-Power Agreement.

Since then, Mr. Pittman has been seeking a compromise and clearly it is only enthusiasm that has kept him going. As fast as he placates one party, fresh objections are raised by another. First Holland, then Britain and then Spain, none of them really vitally concerned except indirectly, provided new hitches. When he has gone the rounds, he will probably have to begin all over again. Senator Pittman has not given up hope, but optimism has gone.

OH NEPTUNE!

The old Gulf Stream, which has been sneaking home after dark in its stocking feet, has been caught at it. For years this warm-hearted old traveller has been giving the oceanographers and other interested parties an impression that it strolled leisurely, up America's Atlantic coast, crossed over to the British Isles and went to bed possibly somewhere in the arctic regions. But detectives have been on its trail and they have picked up enough clues to satisfy themselves that the wily old stream is a regular rounder. They have learned that it undoubtedly makes a circular tour of the Atlantic Ocean and returns to its home in the Gulf of Mexico. Wiggle as it might, the Gulf Stream was unable to shake off the relentless eye of the oceanographer which parked on its tail and followed it around the island of Spitzbergen, down through the North Sea, into the English Channel and out again, down to the west coast of Africa and across the Atlantic to the Caribbean Sea and home. A pretty little piece of detective work and one that should bring the villain to the bar of justice as the head and tail of Neptune's greatest ring.

BREAKABLE BABIES

Of the many children who enter slumberland through that dreamy portal called Lullaby, at least a few must acquire a deep perplexity. "Rock a bye, baby, on the tree top," is of itself a suggestion with a charming prospect. But the subsequent warning—"If the bough breaks the cradle will fall"—must seem ill-calculated to usher a baby into a state of restful quietude.

Especially since babies have been declared "breakable" does the inappropriateness of the line appear. But it should not be supposed that the theory of destructibility as it concerns babyhood condemns such gentler practices as rocking, and even tossing, the child. Records of babies rocked and tossed prove that the long list of "dents" in this connection may be ignored, according to Dr. W. C. Densley of America. Of course, when you toss the tot, you must do it with a certain amount of technique, never forgetting that how and where the baby lands is an important point to consider. As for rocking the baby, most parents will agree that the really important thing in this process is to be reasonably sure that it is the child who is falling asleep.

BRITAIN IS FINDING FAITH AGAIN

By G. WARD PRICE

Is it possible that, amid all the anxieties and perplexities of our public affairs, a great revival of Christianity is on the way? In other parts of the English-speaking world certain signs suggest strongly that a new religious movement has begun.

For the last quarter of a century it has been a commonplace assertion in this country that we are growing more and more godless.

That statement is based upon the change in the habits of religious observance which every Briton who has reached middle age has witnessed in his or her lifetime.

It is a fact that in areas where regular records of church attendance are kept, the decline in the number of churchgoers in the past fifty years amounts in some cases to 60 per cent.

Those of us who were children at the beginning of this century can remember that anyone in those days who did not go to church at least once on Sunday was regarded, almost as a social outcast. To read novels or newspapers, play games or sing secular songs on Sunday seemed to the generation that immediately preceded ours to be a definite breach of the law of God.

Even people who were brought up in this atmosphere have difficulty to-day in understanding the earnest convictions that used to inspire such a horror of the sin of "Sabbath-breaking." There can be no doubt that the nation is healthier and happier for having made Sunday a day of public recreation. I myself doubt very much whether its religious faith has been in any way diminished by that change.

The truth is that religion is largely a matter of temperament, and that few nations are temperamentally more devout than the British. Their principles are none the less strong for being masked under conventional disguises. The easiest Christian precept for the average Briton to obey is the one which warns against a Pharisaic display of piety. But the British ideals represented by such terms as "decency" or "playing the game" are directly inspired by the Golden Rule of the Christian faith: Do unto others as ye would that they should do unto you.

To the foreign visitors, of whom so many are over here just now, the external appearance of England may indeed suggest indifference to religion. In our cathedrals they find many sightseers, but fewer worshippers than one sees in the great shrines of other European countries. Yet the speech of even the roughest class of Briton is free from the blasphemous oaths that similar people in some other countries commonly employ, and public opinion here would never tolerate the irreverent cartoons and anti-Christian jokes that are to be found from time to time in sections of the Continental Press.

But though the dominant British qualities of shyness and reserve apply to our religious instincts as to many other aspects of our lives, there is no nation that devotes more serious individual thought to religious matters. The multiplicity of British sects and denominations is evidence of the deep attention paid by the people of this country to questions of Christian practice and doctrine. And at regular intervals throughout our history this underlying foundation of belief rises to the surface. The instinctive restraints and inhibitions that prevent us in normal times from even discussing questions of religion, except in very intimate company, disappear, and a "religious revival," as we call it, sweeps across the land.

The first great English revivalist was John Wycliffe, who lived 600 years ago. In those days religion was standardised under the undisputed authority of the Church of Rome. It required a courage almost beyond our comprehension to challenge that authority, as Wycliffe did, by denouncing the abuses that had crept into the priesthood. But he aroused an immediate response from the people of this country.

Though the Church then possessed considerable judicial power, which it tried to use by arraigning him on charges of heresy, the Bishops could not prevail against the popular support which Wycliffe found among all classes, from the humble peasant to that all-but-royal nobleman, John of Gaunt. It was not till forty-five years after his death that his remains were disinterred and burnt by the Pope's order, but by that time the Wycliffe movement had prepared the way for the English Reformation.

Two hundred years ago another great impetus was given to the religious life of this country by John Wesley. Like Wycliffe, Wesley began his revivalist campaign at Oxford. That University has always been a fertile seed-bed for the flowering of religious faith.

As is the case to-day, the England of the eighteenth century seemed sunk in cynicism and indifference. The Established Church was full of scandals. Many vicars held several livings, and were hardly ever seen in any one of them. Bishops neglected their dioceses. Slackness, formalism and dissipation were widespread among the clergy. To combat this state of things, Wesley formed a group of Oxford students, who took the name of the Methodists and undertook itinerant tours of preaching. Then he, with his brother Charles, the hymn-writer, and Charles Whitefield, the great preacher, moved to London and devoted themselves to a national campaign of revival, the effects of which have never passed away.

This month there is being celebrated the centenary of yet another of these mighty periodic stirrings of the religious belief that may slumber deeply but never dies in the hearts of the British people. It was known as the Oxford Movement, and was associated with such great figures as F. D. Maurice, Keble and Newman, who later joined the Roman Catholic Church and became a Cardinal. Profoundly as their activities divided the Church of England for a time, the vitalising effect of their zeal was unmistakable.

Many people still living can remember the enthusiasm with which the American revivalists Moody and Sankey were received in this country during the last quarter of the nineteenth century. Moody was a layman, but a forceful preacher. His companion, Ira D. Sankey, was a singer, who used to lead the vast meetings they held in the singing of hymns which have since become familiar to the whole British people.

The Very Idea!

PROTOGRAMS

By Ed. Kelly, Rah! Rah! Rah!

PROTOGRAMMIC and Telescopic words are being added to the American dictionaries.

For instance, a Proto-gram is a word that is made up from initial letters, such as "Nep", which means in Russia the New Economic Policy. The other day we had "Wec", meaning the World Economic Conference.

Telescopic words are a combination of abbreviated words, such as "SOCONY", which means "Standard Oil Company of New York."

All right, let's have it.

Think what a saving of time, paper, and labour it would mean. The Hongkong Government, pardon the Hogov—could explain their whole policy with regard to the Cabaret question by one word, "nocabs."

All we'd have to say every time the shroffs came would be "Goobikyo." They'd instantly know that it meant "Get Out Of Here Before I Kick You Out."

Then think of the convenience of reading in the newspaper, "Hob sells Beer at Halfa Bab", instead of the long-winded "Hongkong Brewery sells Beer at Half a Buck a Bottle." Think of it. Think of the beer at half a buck a bottle. Lead us to it.

Americans, of course, can be relied upon to reduce this new language to a fine scale. Picking up their newspaper, Americans of the future will read, "Demhugbrep blaskherb", and will know from long habit that it means "Demands hundred grand for breach of promise; blonde asks heart balm."

Going to the telephone in his difficult moments, the Hongkong business taipan could give his reason for not going home with the single word "slatofcon" meaning "staying late at office for conference."

Such protogrammatic words as Clif, E&OE and IOU are too well known to need mention here. But a lot of Hongkong people will have to prepare for "Ita In Swam", meaning, of course, "If this account is not settled within a month."

On second thoughts, though, we think we'll stick to our good old English. We've got to fill this column up every day.

MUSIC-HATH-CHARMS.

He was a careful burglar. He had watched the house patiently for weeks, until he learned for certain that the family had gone for an extensive holiday.

It was a pleasant prospect; he could loot at his leisure.

Dawdling from room to room he thought he might as well have some music. So he turned on the wireless.

As he chose his loot with inherent art, some old-fashioned airs waited gently from the loud speaker, "Genevieve, Sweet Genevieve."

The burglar thought it rather nice. He sat down on the couch and listened while they played "Mother Macbrree." Tears came to his eyes. Tears of shame. "The silver that shines in your hair," He choked as the song ebbed to completion. His mother! He could not but think of her, how she nursed him when he was a little chap.

Slowly he rose to his feet, picked up the bag of loot, emptied everything out on the floor. He took the wireless set instead!

ROUND ROBIN.

Arthur Appel wrote a novel. Benjamin Beck dramatized it. Charles Cook made a photoplay of the drama.

Edward Entz dramatized the novelization.

Frederick Flomo made a talking picture of the dramatization.

George Gallifry wrote a short story from the picture.

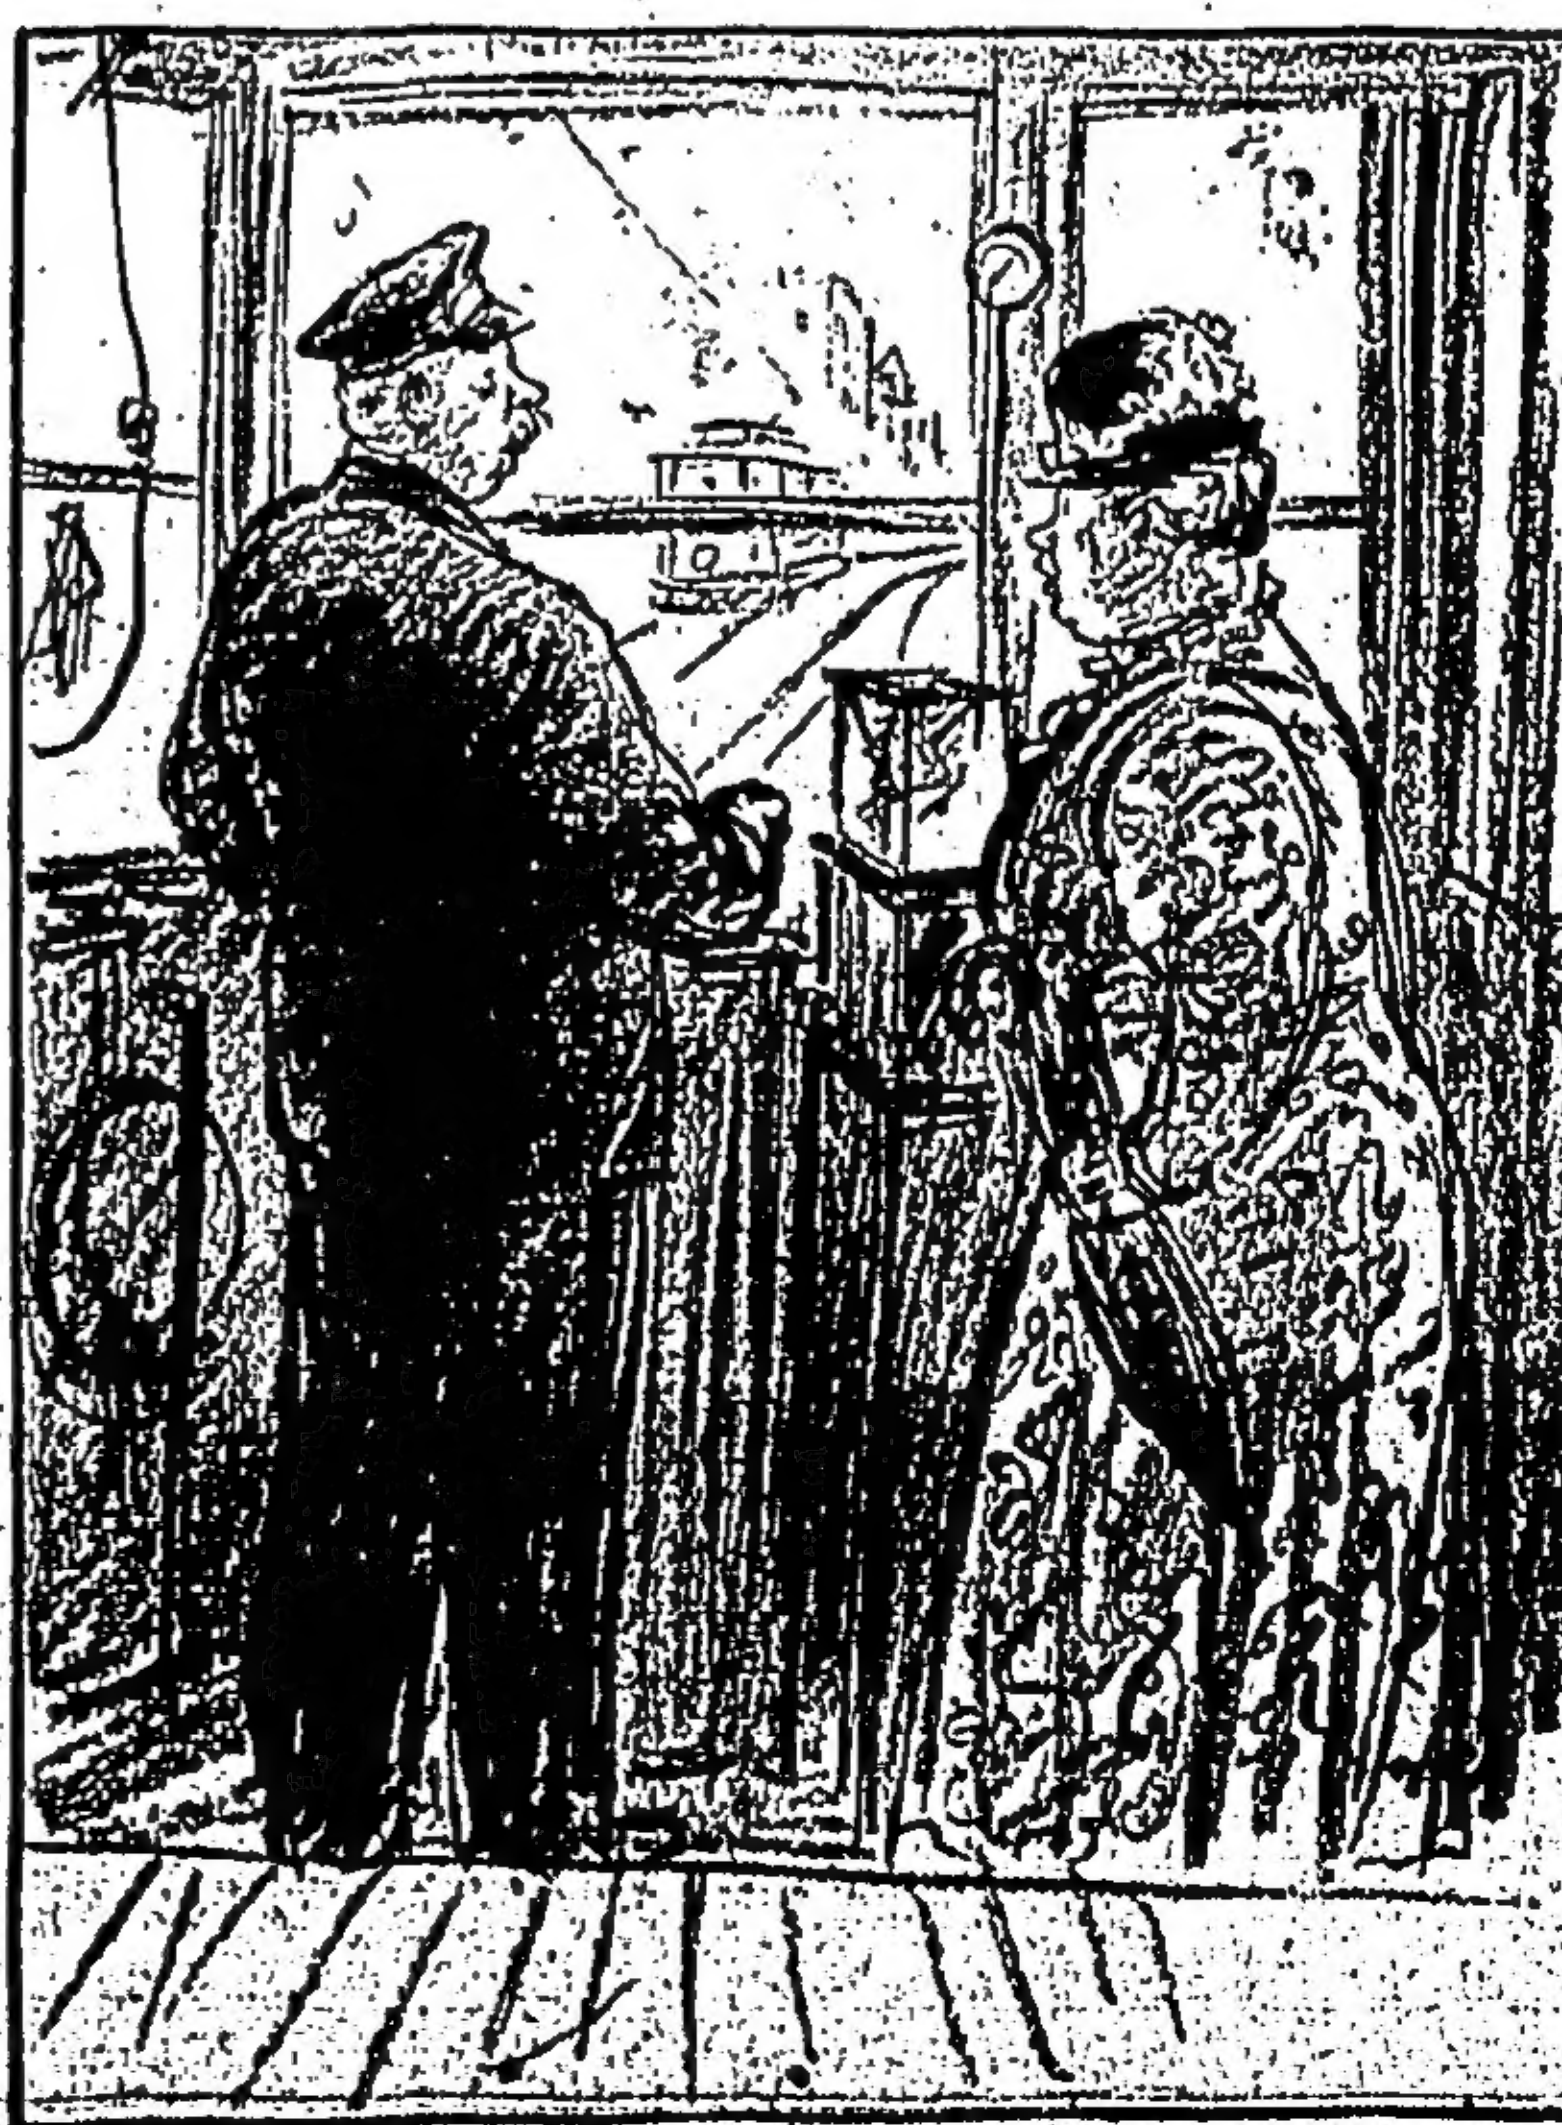

Helen Hooker made a radio sketch from the short story.

Arthur Appel heard the radio sketch and wrote a novel.

Benjamin Beck dramatized it. Charles Cook made a television of the dramatization.

George Gallifry sued Charles Cook for plagiarism. Arthur Appel sued George Gallifry. Benjamin Beck sued Edward Entz.

And that, alas, is how we came to Hongkong to make a "Round Robin" holiday!

"Do you remember where I got off when I was on this car with my daughter-in-law a week ago Tuesday?"

KOWLOON CABARET SUMMONS.

ACTION FAILS BECAUSE OF TECHNICAL POINT

The case against the Cathay Dancing Institute by residents of Katherine Building yesterday, when D. Powell, the proprietor of the Institute, was summoned before Mr. Butters at the Kowloon Magistracy for committing a nuisance between sunset and sunrise on July 8 was eventually dismissed on a technical point.

Defendant was in Court when the case was called in the afternoon, and stated that there was a mistake regarding the summons as he had ceased to be the owner of the Institute since May, when he sold it to Mr. Burgess. "I have nothing to do with it now," he added.

"When the sergeant served the summons, I was actually present, and I told him that it was a mistake. I then went to see Mr. Booker at the Yau Ma Tei Police Station and explained matters to him."

Inspector Booker interposed here, saying that he wished to contest defendant's statement. As far as the Police were aware, Powell had been the proprietor since last December. He pointed out that when the Cathay Dancing Institute was summoned for selling intoxicating liquor, Powell was named, together with a man named Shepherd, as co-partners. Later on, a man named Burgess was summoned for causing a nuisance by residents of Katherine Building, but that was when Powell was confined to his ship as a result of the Police action regarding liquor on the premises. Defendant resumed charge when he came out.

Continuing, Inspector Booker said he spoke to the defendant last month and the latter told him, "We are closing down at the end of this month (June)." Now the Police officer understood that the Institute would be closed at the end of July.

Mr. P. A. Dixon, residing at Katherine Buildings, who took out the summons, stated that after the summons had been served, defendant went up to his house last Tuesday, but he was not in. Defendant spoke to his father, and asked that the summons be withdrawn, giving an assurance that the nuisance would abate. Defendant signed this assurance, as proprietor and manager of the Cathay Dancing Institute.

His Worship remarked that defendant could not deny responsibility and at the same time give a written assurance. In the circumstances, he would take defendant's statement as a plea of not guilty.

Complainant's Evidence.

Giving evidence, Mr. Dixon stated that July 8 was a Saturday. At 8 p.m. he heard the orchestra at the Cathay Dancing Academy striking up in the usual way, and at 8.45 p.m. witness left his house to attend the night fete at the V.R.C.

Answering the Magistrate, witness said he had never been inside the Cathay and he did not know what instruments the orchestra used. He could make out a piano and several string instruments.

Magistrate.—What happened afterwards?—I had already gone to the V.R.C., but I have other witnesses here.

But you took out the summons. What happened between 8 and 8.45 p.m. when you were home?—The band played in the usual way. You were not home after 8.45 p.m.?—No.

And they did not disturb you?—No, not on that particular night.

But when you took out the summons, you were asked to give a date?—Yes, I was asked to give a date.

You chose that date yourself?—Yes.

That was a very foolish thing to do. Magistrate (to Inspector Booker).—I don't see any evidence of disturbance on the night in question. I discharge the defendant. It's the residents' own fault.

Defendant.—Thank you, your Worship.

DAVIS CUP TIE

1934 Elimination Contest

Vienna, July 18.

In the second preliminary round of the 1934 Davis Cup competition, Austria defeated Spain to-day, taking all five matches of the series.

Only from those teams which compete in the eliminations will the challengers come. No others will be allowed to compete.

On July 22, however, a meeting will be held in Paris, at which international representatives will attend, which will discuss cancellation of this system.

their latest victims. Herbert Sutcliffe and Macauley played leading parts in the success, the former compiling 177 in an innings which totalled 367, and Macauley sent back Middlesex in their second innings for 114 after they had made 305 in their initial occupation of the crease.

But one of the finest achievements of the match was that of Sims, the Middlesex trundler, who in face of the big Yorkshire score, captured 5 wickets for 69 runs.

Derbyshire's batting broke down against Sussex and mainly contributed to their defeat by six wickets.

James Langridge bowled them out in their second knock for 195, after they had hit up 168 in the first innings.

Sussex replied with 284 and then lost four wickets obtaining 72 runs to win the match.

Northants completely outplayed Worcester to record victory by an innings and 53 runs. Liddell's century was followed by Jupp's accurate bowling which earned for him an analysis of 5 for 61.

was strongly contested, the K.C.C. just scraping home by the odd point, with five matches to four.

S. A. Gray and G. C. Burnett (K.C.C.) beat D. Gutierrez and I. A. Noronha, 6-3; lost to L. Silva and J. J. Remedios, 3-6; drew with A. E. Xavier and J. B. Gonzales, 6-6.

S. E. Green and D. S. Green (K.C.C.) beat Gutierrez and Noronha, 6-2; lost to Silva and Remedios, 2-6; lost to Xavier and Gonzales, 6-6.

The match between U.S.R.C. and C.R.C. was postponed owing to the unfit condition of the courts.

DAY BY DAY NEWS IN BRIEF

AND LET ME TELL YOU THAT EVERY MISERY I MISS IS A NEW BLESSING.—Isaac Walton.

The R.M.S. "Empress of Japan" left Vancouver for Hongkong, via Honolulu, Japan and Shanghai, on Saturday, and is due at Hongkong on the 4th August.

Appearing from behind a tram, a Chinese was knocked down by a car from the other direction, in Queen's Road East, near the Naval Yard yesterday, receiving injuries which led to his removal to hospital. In Nathan Road, Kowloon, a Chinese woman was injured in the head when she got into the way of a car and was struck.

PUBLIC MISCHIEF CASE

UMBRELLA MAKER DISCHARGED

"It would be a terrible thing if I stated that the district watch force were allowed to arrest at large free of all responsibility that is on the Police. I think the responsibility still remains, and where it is still possible to check the information, it must be checked before arrests."

"That was not done in this case. If it had been done it is possible the original informer, Lo Kwong, would have been caught and the matter would have been very different," remarked Mr. Wynne-Jones in the Central Police Court this morning, when he discharged Tsang Pui, an umbrella maker, who was remanded from yesterday.

Defendant was charged with "effecting a public mischief by causing officers of the District Watch Force to devote time and services on the investigations of false allegations, thereby temporarily depriving the public of the services of the officers and rendering one Chow Mo-ning liable to suspicion, accusation and arrest."

The Magistrate added—"Unfortunately in this Colony, a magistrate cannot state a case as he can at Home and therefore I have to accept the responsibility myself and I must be very careful not to allow any new principle to be brought into the Rex v. Manley case recently decided by the Court of Appeal."

ROTARY TIFFINS.

TO BE DISCONTINUED DURING SUMMER MONTHS?

The suggestion that the Rotary Club tiffin be discontinued during the heat of the summer months was made by Rotarian A. L. Shields at the Rotary Club tiffin at Gloucester Building yesterday.

He said that he, and probably many others, felt that on a hot day they did not wish to go to some definite place for tiffin. He was aware that members of Rotary should not be absent, and that if members were absent for a certain number of times without reason all sorts of pains and penalties may be visited on them. He thought it would be a good idea to discontinue the tiffin, say until September 15. Then they would come back fresh.

The president, Rotarian T. B. Wilson, moved that the matter be considered by the directors, who should draw up a memorandum to be submitted to the next meeting, and this was agreed to.

Guests welcomed at the tiffin were Messrs. G. R. Payne and H. R. Wilkinson (London).

Apologies for absence were received from Rotarians R. H. Kotewall, A. E. Gerondal and Rev. E. G. Powell.

A brief paper on "The Rotary Club through the eyes of the Press Representatives," compiled by Messrs. S. Haroon (H.K. Daily Press) and J. R. Luke (S. C. M. Post), was read by Mr. Haroon, and a vote of thanks was voiced by the secretary, Mr. M. F. Key.

The chairman stated that he heartily agreed with the remark in the paper that the members were "strong, silent men". Some months ago the Club had a membership of 100 and they were silent men! It was a real effort to get any of them to air their views, and they had to go outside for their speakers. He appealed for suggestions for future programmes. They could consider the question of a "Ladies Day" on which they could invite their wives, sweethearts and daughters to tiffin. The officers had had their hands full trying to get out programmes.

WATER POLO GAMES.

Y.M.C.A. Beats Chinese Team Handily.

In the water polo league matches played at the Chinese Civil Servants' Bathing Club in North Point yesterday afternoon the European Y.M.C.A. beat the Chinese, the score being 9-0. The score in half time was 4-0.

In the second match, between the South China Athletic Association "B" and the Hongkong University, the score was a draw, 2-2.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

YESTERDAY'S MARKET STEADY

According to Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz, the New York market was steady yesterday. Business done 8,500,000 shares. The Wall Street Journal reports:—Mining shares soared near the close of the market advancing entire list and was most active due to a decline in the U.S. Dollar and reports that the United States will soon lift gold ban making it possible for a free gold market. The list was irregular earlier in the day due to heavy profit-taking. U.S. Steel, however, touched 67 for the first time since 1931 due to bullish industry news. Grain prices were unsettled by heavy profit-taking. Cable received at 10.58 during our Night Service from Swan, Culbertson and Fritz, New York. The market may be approaching climatic bulge and cautiousness seems advisable, although higher prices should follow any temporary reaction. Wheat: Liverpool strong. Reckless public buying is a feature here for cash. Cotton: Opened higher in Liverpool and on exchange. There is more selling on advances. Average brokerage opinion is to be more cautious and still feels that moderation at present levels advisable.

KENT AND SURREY IN THRILLING MATCH

RECTORY FIELD INCIDENTS

FREEMAN'S BIG EFFORT

KENT WIN ON TIME

OTHER CRICKET WASHED OUT

London, July 18. The Rectory Field at Blackheath, whose cricket history records the doughty deeds of Kent and Surrey in days gone by, was the scene of another thrilling match between these two counties during the last three days, culminating in a Kent victory by 215 runs only a few minutes before close of play.

Cricket in some of its best aspects was seen in the course of the match. Kent, ten runs in arrears on the first innings, set about the Surrey bowling until it had been reduced to impotence and the Hop county had at least made themselves safe from defeat.

After that came Freeman. Bowling with marked skill, he tied the Surrey batsmen up in knots and made possible a dramatic Kent victory, the last Surrey batsman being sent back with only a few minutes to spare.

Apart from the fitting climax, there were several distinctive performances. Gover opened up big possibilities for Surrey when he dismissed Kent in their first visit to the crease for 251. His share was to capture 6 wickets for 82 runs.

HOBBS TO THE RESCUE.

Surrey, however, did not make the most of their opportunity, and but for Hobbs would have made a pretty sorry reply. As it was, thanks to the former England batsman, who hit up 101, the visitors scored 201, leading by ten on the first innings.

Kent batting was of a vastly different calibre in the return visit. Leslie Ames and Leslie Todd, two of the youngsters of the team, set about their task of scoring plenty of runs with refreshing abandon and vigour. Both topped the century mark before dismissal. Ames scoring 137 and Todd 121. It enabled Kent to apply the closure at 377 for 6, leaving Surrey to score 368 to win.

In view of the time at their disposal it was an impossible task.

HONOURS LIST.

BATTING.

Sutcliffe (Yorks) v Middlesex	177
Ames (Kent) v Surrey	137
C. C. Case (Somerset) v Hants	132
Todd (Kent) v Surrey	121
Liddell (Northants) v Worcester	113
Walker (Notts) v Lancashire	103
Hobbs (Surrey) v Kent	101

BOWLING.

Hollies (Warwick) v Gloucester	8 for 54
Macauley (Yorks) v Middlesex	7 for 52
Goddard (Gloucester) v Warwick	7 for 63
Gover (Surrey) v Kent	6 for 82
Jupp (Northants) v Worcester	5 for 51
Freeman (Kent) v Surrey	5 for 50
Langridge, Jas (Sussex) v Derby	5 for 63
Sims (Middlesex) v Yorkshire	5 for 69
Mitchell (Derby) v Sussex	5 for 74

As it was the visitors collapsed before the wiles of Freeman and in a great race against the clock, just lost.

Rain ruined W. Walker's benefit match in which Notts met Lancashire, and so restricted were the hours of play that it was impossible to complete two innings.

Walker enjoyed the distinction of scoring a three figure innings, made out of 276.

Lancashire, in reply, scored freely and when rain put an end to the game were only 71 runs behind with six wickets in hand.

Yorkshire again, in reply, scored freely and when rain put an end to the game were only 71 runs behind with six wickets in hand.

LEAGUE TENNIS.

CLOSE CALL FOR K.C.C. RECREIO JUST BEATEN

DECISION ON THE LAST SET

"B" DIVISION MATCH

(By "Veritas")

After leading by two and a half sets to a half on the first round, the Kowloon Cricket Club had to fight hard to beat the Recreio in a "B" Division tennis league match yesterday, and finally scraped home by the odd set in nine.

The visitors made a smart recovery, and eventually the result depended on the last two sets. Recreio obtained one, but Jack Rodger and Hamby managed to clinch the issue for the Cricket Club.

The courts were in a difficult condition, overnight rain leaving them soft and a sharp shower before start rendering the surface slippery and a little dangerous. The Recreio took some time to settle down, and this enabled the K.C.C. to assume a valuable lead. Rodger and Hamby made the utmost of the position by winning quickly against L. Silva and J.J. Remedios. This Recreio pair, as soon as they had settled down, proved distinctly superior to either of the other K.C.C. combinations and won their remaining two sets with little difficulty.

SMART RECOVERY.

The best achievement of Rodger and Hamby, who won two and a half sets, was to share the points with A. E. Xavier and J. B. Gonçales after being 5-1 in arrears. By retrieving everything possible, the K.C.C. pair took a sequence of games and halved the set.

Burnett and Gray should have won their first set. Instead of leaving it halved, they jumped into a three-love lead and then lost it. They caught up after being 5-4 in arrears to lead again at 6-5, but Gonçales service saved the Recreio couple.

The Recreio were a little unlucky to find the verdict against them, and under different conditions there is little doubt that the result would have been reversed.

YANKEES STILL WINNING

New York, July 18. At their present rate of going the Washington Senators will very soon be off the map so far as the American League leadership is concerned.

The Giants helped themselves to another useful win, and St. Louis, their closest rivals followed suit, being too good for Philadelphia.

FINE SPORTING RECORD

Mexico Astonished By English Man

London. For 28 years an English sportsman, Mr. Claude Butlin, has astonished Mexico with his athletic feats. He is known to Mexican sport fans by the affectionate name of "Claudio," and he probably has a larger record of sporting conquests than any other Englishman living abroad.

He was born in Ceylon and educated at St. George's College, Surrey.

These are some of "Claudio's" triumphs:

For 20 years he was singles tennis champion of Mexico.
For ten years open champion at golf.

For nine years he topped bowling and batting average in Mexico. (He has broken 50 stumps in the course of his bowling career.)

For five years he has been Mexican champion at the open hurdles as well as for the 70, 100, and 220 yards.

INTERPORT SWIMMING

JAPANESE INVITATION ACCEPTED

PREPARATIONS IN HAND

At a special meeting of the committee of the Shanghai Amateur Swimming Association, held at the Foreign Y.M.C.A. last Wednesday, an invitation from the Kobe Swimming Association invited Shanghai to send a team for an interport gala in that city to be held sometime during the second week of September, was put before the members and accepted.

The local Association decided to accept this invitation from Kobe and preparations are now being made for the selection of the team and meeting the expenses of the trip. A committee of three has been chosen to take care of the arrangements for local galas to help raise funds for the trip. This committee will also have major responsibility for the selection of the team that will represent Shanghai. Mr. J. Huxley, of the Cercle Sportif Français, is chairman of this committee and G. A. Johnston, former Hon. Secretary and Treasurer of the Shanghai Amateur Swimming Association, and Chas. Brown, one of the most experienced swimmers in Shanghai, will serve on this committee. It is probable that the team will leave for Kobe September 10 or 12 and that the gala will take place about the middle of the month.

LOCAL CHAMPIONSHIPS.

An announcement is also made in connection with the meeting of the dates and places for holding the Shanghai Championships for

LEAGUE TENNIS.

RE-ARRANGED "A" DIV. MATCH.

A re-arranged "A" Division league tennis match will be played this afternoon, when the Indian Recreation Club entertain the South China "B" team at Sookunpoo.

This match was originally scheduled for Monday, July 10, but rain prevented it from being played.

1933. The first gala with Championships will be held at the Cercle Sportif Français on August 24 and 25. The Shanghai Rowing Club will hold its annual gala on the following week-end (Sept. 1 and 2) and the Foreign Y.M.C.A. will hold the final gala with Championships on September 9.

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY
THE THEATRES

With a cast including Boots Mallory, Wampas Baby Star, Ralph Morgan, Alexander Kirkland, Irene Ware, Noel Madison, Christian Rub and Ferike Dorog, "Humankity" comes to the King's Theatre on Thursday.

The story embraces the elements of romance and sacrifice as it depicts the adventures of a young doctor who is blind to the ideals of his physician father and who follows the lure of money because of his infatuation of a luxury-loving woman.

Kirkland and Miss Mallory divide the romantic interest and Morgan enacts the role of the father who, with the girl, attempts to guide aright the faltering footsteps of the boy.

Miss Mallory's previous success was "Handle With Care" in which she shared leading honours with James Dunn. Kirkland was widely acclaimed for his recent performance in "Strange Interlude", in which Morgan also played an important role.

Miss Ware who, like Miss Mallory, came from the New York stage, made her picture debut in "Chandu the Magician" and more recently appeared with Warner Baxter in "Six Hours to Live".

"Hell Below"

"Hell Below," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's striking drama of life in the submarine service, with Robert Montgomery, Walter Huston, Madge Evans, Jimmy Durante, Eugene Pallette and Robert Young, in a great cast, is providing a blend of thrills, romance and comedy at the Queen's Theatre where the finalization of Commander Edward Ellsberg's notable novel, "Pigboats," is now being shown.

The story is a tremendously dramatic one, dealing with the conflict between love and duty faced by a young naval lieutenant in action in the Mediterranean during the World War. Montgomery is serving under the father of the girl he loves, but whose love is forbidden him. How, by disobeying orders, he loses his commission and subsequently redeems himself by a heroic sacrifice is depicted against a thunderous background of naval battles, fights with enemy aircraft and the whole great panorama of war at sea.

"The King's Cup"

"The King's Cup" is having its final run at the Central Theatre to-day. Among the highlights of this latest British and Dominion film are scenes taken in Cheddar Gorge as a "plane dashes through. This was a dangerous flying feat. A camera was fixed on the front of a plane so that its view-point was approximately that of the pilot—and the plane was then flown down the Gorge. This was a thrilling experience for the pilot and the passenger—Harry Milton and Dorothy Bouchier.

"The Silver Lining"

John Warburton, the screen's latest find, is regarded as the "fastest man" in motion pictures.

He won that title by a dash to Hollywood, an appearance before the camera without a test and the completion of his first picture without a retake.

Warburton, a young Englishman who is said to look like the Prince of Wales and who is appearing now in "The Silver Lining" at the King's, was appearing opposite Alice Brady on the stage in New York City when he received a call to dash to Hollywood. His show closed on a Saturday night, he took a plane on Sunday morning and on Monday thirty hours later he was before the camera.

This for his first motion picture role, a record never before attempted. No tests were made of Warburton the fact that he for the past six years had been starring in Broadway productions was enough to convince Alan Crosland, director, that Warburton possessed the necessary qualifications desirable in a leading man for film roles.

Tall, good looking, a man's man, Warburton is a new name in motion pictures to conjure with.

"What! No Beer?"

At last the Wots and the Drys can agree on something. Those on either side who go to see the beer problem expounded by Buster Keaton and Jimmy Durante in "What! No Beer?" which opens next Sunday at the Queen's Theatre will agree that as beer makers they are a pair of swell comedians. With malice toward none, and hearty laughter for all, Buster and the Schnozzle operate a brewery in this hilarious tale. The foamy liquid flows so fast that it all but drowns them in one of the scenes.

Celebrated Artists Perform

It all happens when Buster, who is as dry as Jimmy Durante is wet, and "Schnozzle" leave the polls on election day and, quicker than they know what has happened, find themselves at the helm of a brewery, with two rival beer-running factions battling over their output. Buster lets himself be persuaded into the brewing business by the enterprising Durante because he has fallen in love with a girl he believes to be a society debutante, but who turns out to be the affinity of one of the beer running barons. And when the police raid their brewery, which is turning out 1,000 barrels a day, the comedians find themselves with the problem of getting rid of the evidence—which they do in a very novel way. The whole story is loaded with laughs and exciting episodes.

A musical interlude of importance forms a sequence of "Platinum Blonde," the Columbia comedy-drama, showing to-morrow at the Queen's Theatre. It represents a reception in a millionaire's mansion. Sol Cohen, noted violinist and concertmaster for Ruth St. Denis and other celebrated artists, and Joseph Diskin, Hungarian tenor, offer a brilliant Spanish selection in this scene. Incidentally this scene forms the background for a very dramatic interlude in the picture.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

Many players seem to have a secret dread of playing a four-card suit. Four-card suits play an all-important part in contract bridge to-day, and the handling of four-card suits is not difficult if you apply a few simple rules.

If you are in a game contract in a four-card suit, you will generally find that your partner holds four trump also, and this is an ideal distribution.

Here is one of the first rules to learn—establish your side suit before picking up the trump, unless the opponents will be unable to compel you to ruff a short suit and thereby shorten your own trump suit. To illustrate this point, let us take the following hand.

The Bidding

South and West passed. North, holding a four-card diamond suit and a four-card heart suit, should open the bidding with one diamond. This is the one time when you bid the lowest ranking suit first—when you have a four-card major and a four-card minor and are

♠ J-10-4	♥ A-8-7	♦ A-10-6	♣ A-6
♠ 7-5	♥ A-8-2	♦ K-8	♣ 5-2
♠ 9-5	♥ 3-2	♦ K-9-2	♣ 10-9-6-3
♠ 3-2	♥ 7-6	♦ 7-3	♣ J-8

making an original bid in either third or fourth position.

East overcalled with two clubs. South had not enough strength to make a constructive bid, so he passed. West passed. North bid two hearts, South bid three hearts and North went to four hearts.

The Play

East's opening lead was the king of clubs which North, the declarer, won with the ace. Remember the first rule when playing a four-card suit is to establish the side suit.

The side suit in this hand is spades—but you do not establish the side suit if you are not afraid of exhausting your trumps by ruffing, and in this case you have only one club in each hand. Therefore, if the opponents try to force you to ruff, you will be able to trump in one hand and discard in the other.

Therefore, instead of starting your spade suit, you should immediately lead your hearts.

If you lead a spade, East will win with the ace and return a spade. Then, if you lead a trump, West will win with the ace. He will return a club back to East. Another spade will be led and West will trump and your contract will be defeated.

If you start the hearts you can quickly force West to win with his ace and then you will not let the spade ruff and will make your game.

SECRETARY OF STEAMSHIP COMPANY

DEATH OF MR. G. E. ELLAMS

His many friends will regret to learn that the death occurred at the Canossa Hospital yesterday, after an illness of over two months, of Mr. George Ernest Ellams, secretary of the Hongkong, Canton and Macao Steamship Co., Ltd.

Mr. Ellams, who was 44 years of age, was formerly of Singapore. He went to England towards the end of the Great War to join the Artists Rifles, but the Armistice was signed before he got to France. He then joined the shipping firm of Messrs. Alfred Holts, of Liverpool. Thirteen years ago he came to Hongkong as assistant secretary to the Hongkong, Canton and Macao Steamship Co., Ltd., and during the absence of Mr. J. Arnold, secretary, acted in that post. He was made secretary of the Company in 1932. He was a keen tennis player and golfer, and a racing enthusiast. Of a cheerful disposition, he will be greatly missed by the staff of the Steamship company, with whom he was extremely popular.

Mr. Ellams was unmarried, but leaves a sister in Liverpool and a brother.

The funeral takes place to-day, passing the Monument at 5.30 p.m.

brother, Isaac Ezra, pleaded guilty to violation of the Narcotic Laws when arraigned at San Francisco on July 6.

They were arrested following the discovery of a large consignment of drugs aboard the N. Y. K.
liner, Asama Maru. The drugs were concealed in oil drums.

The American authorities are satisfied that by the capture of Judah Ezra they have broken into one of the biggest dope-running rings operating in the Far East and the United States.

Sentence upon the two brothers was postponed until September 2, pending the receipt of further information from the Orient regarding the smuggling ring of which the Ezras are alleged to be the heads.

The Assistant Attorney said that the brothers had furnished

UNIFYING CHINA.

CONSTRUCTION PLANS FOR NATIONS

Nanking, July 17.
Mr. Wang Ching-wei speaking at this morning's weekly memorial meeting of the Executive Yuan declared that the Government's policy hereafter was to be directed towards the unification of the country through construction.

He recalled the recent statement issued by Mr. T. V. Soong in which the Finance Minister announced that only seven provinces, Kiang-su, Chekiang, Hopei, Anhwei, Honan, Hupeh and Hunan, were handing over revenues collected in those territories to the Central Government. Meanwhile over half a million troops in Szechuen were fighting against each other. In the past the Government had attempted unification through military force, which had always failed.

Mr. Wang Ching-wei stated that hereafter the Government would devote its energy to construction work in the seven above-mentioned provinces, with the hope that other provinces will gradually follow the example of the Provinces that are remitting revenue.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

YOUR CHILDREN

What Makes Strong Men and Women?

By Olive Roberts Barton

If a mother wishes her child to become really adult in mind and character as well as body, she will start to prepare him for it when he is very young.

I do not know the figures but I am willing to wager that 80 or 90 per cent of us are not adult at all.

If we were we would be happy, no matter what came, along. As it is, in our country particularly, we act like children when misfortune overtakes us. We have never learned either resourcefulness or acceptance.

Instead we have fastened our minds on "wishes" and if they don't come true we are miserable. If they do come true, we don't appreciate them, and instantly transfer our wishes toward something else. Like spoiled children we never do achieve contentment. Like spoiled children we grow bitter when they don't.

Poor Children Grow Strong

It is true that the children of the poor, in spite of under-privilege and handicaps of every sort, usually arrive at maturity with greater self-dependence and force of character than those who are overly protected. Perhaps this lack of attention and comfort may bring them to manhood or womanhood with other unfavourable traits—that depends on the home—but that they are more mature as a class cannot be disputed.

What then are the things that a mother may avoid if she wants her son, or daughter, to develop into a forceful and reliant person later on?

She will begin quite early not to wait on him hand and foot. Children must learn to do things for themselves without grumbling. If they have to put up with a certain amount of discomfort let them. This does not mean neglect, but it does mean to encourage the state of mind that does not whine or grow resentful when attention is denied.

Pity Spoils the Child

She will set certain duties and responsibilities for them, daily tasks that train them to accept work as a matter of course. I think bought toys contribute to laziness. They are grand and necessary things but in the old days when the boy who wanted a wagon or a sled had to make it or do without, the character lesson is obvious.

She will not encourage any child ever to feel sorry for himself, even though there is every reason why he should. The child who stands disappointment well, and who takes trouble like a sport, will not be weeping on the world's shoulder when he grows up.

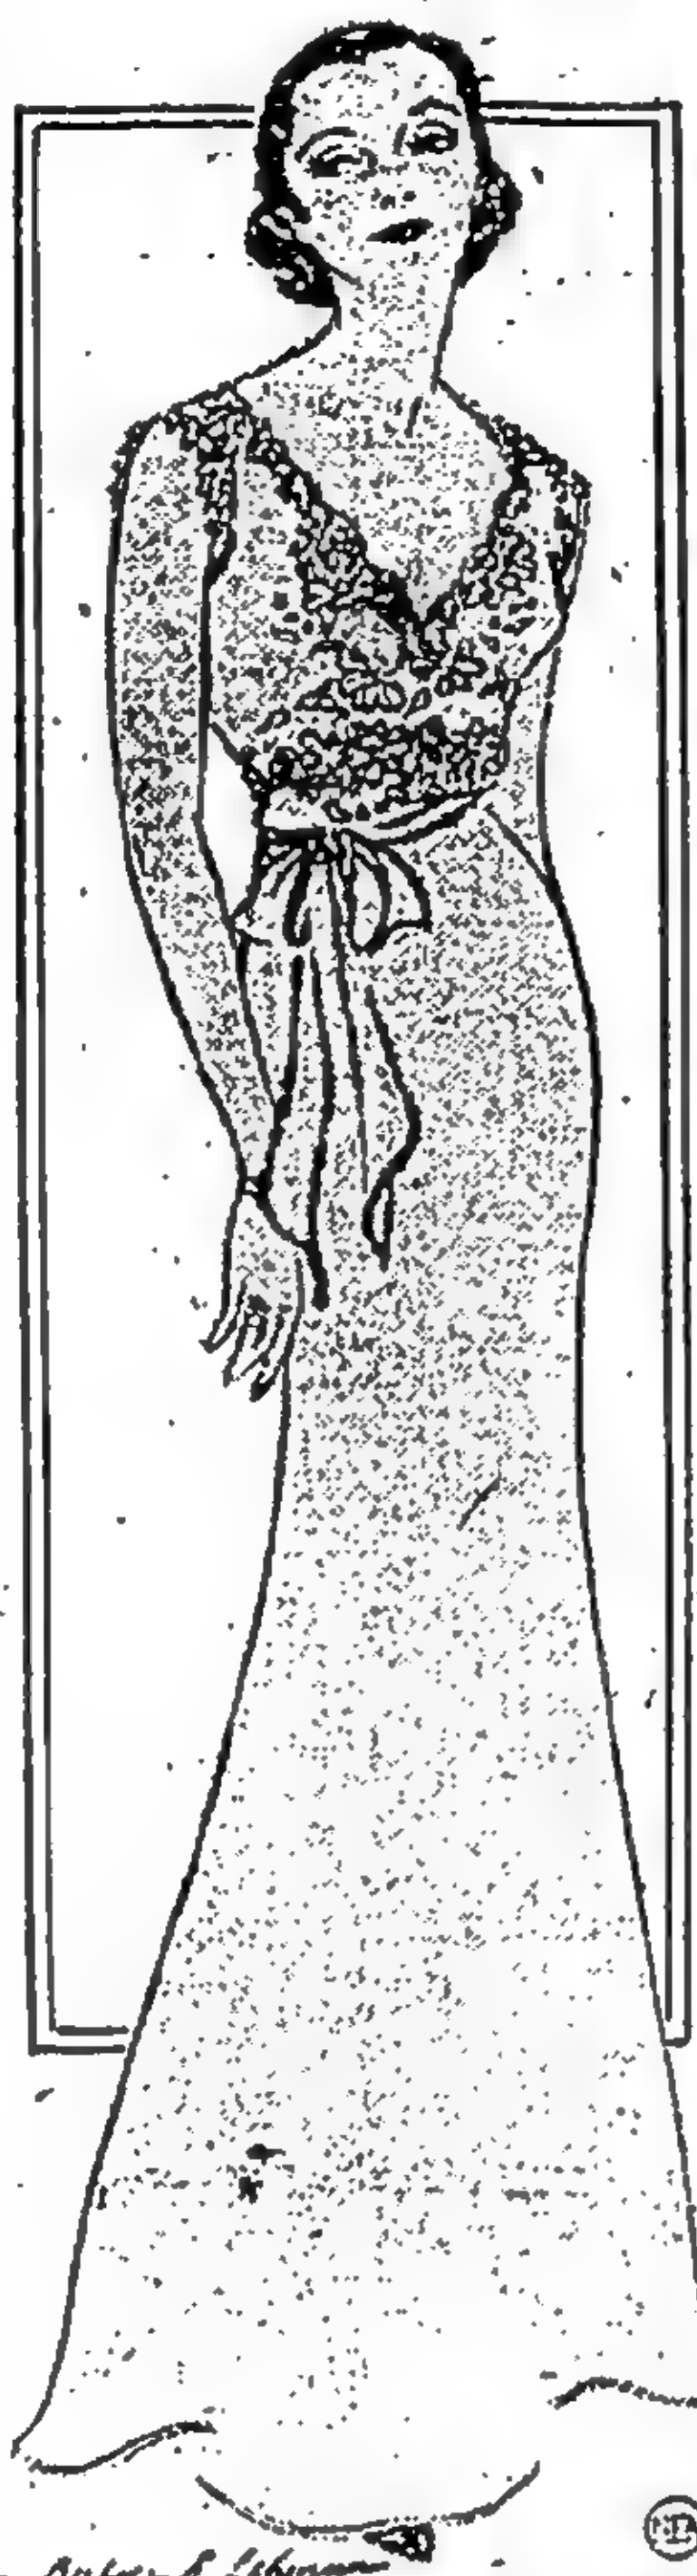

She will be kind, encouraging, happy and understanding, but she will not become either a doormat or a pillow. She will put a staff in his hand, the staff of courage, and show him the way. She won't go ahead to part the brambles. She will walk beside him and they can go the rough path together.

It is a stiff upper lip and backbone that make the adult. Coddling does the opposite. It is the overly-sheltered child who becomes helpless and complaining when mature.

For the Bride

GIFTS OF LINGERIE

—Certain, To Win Her Favour!

By Joan Savoy

If you are caught where you have to give bridal presents how about some lingerie?

No bride has the money these days to buy all the luxurious undies she craves. And you can't give any woman a more acceptable gift than hand-made French underwear.

The best thing about fine lingerie is the handsome way it fits. Slips are shaped just right and the straps are placed to stay put on your shoulders. Gowns come out in princess lines, with fullness through the skirts. And the little panties are tailored to lie flat about the hips.

The best lingerie has both exquisite lace and fine hand-embroidery. When the embroidery is done in the exact design of the lace, then you know that it's super-fine.

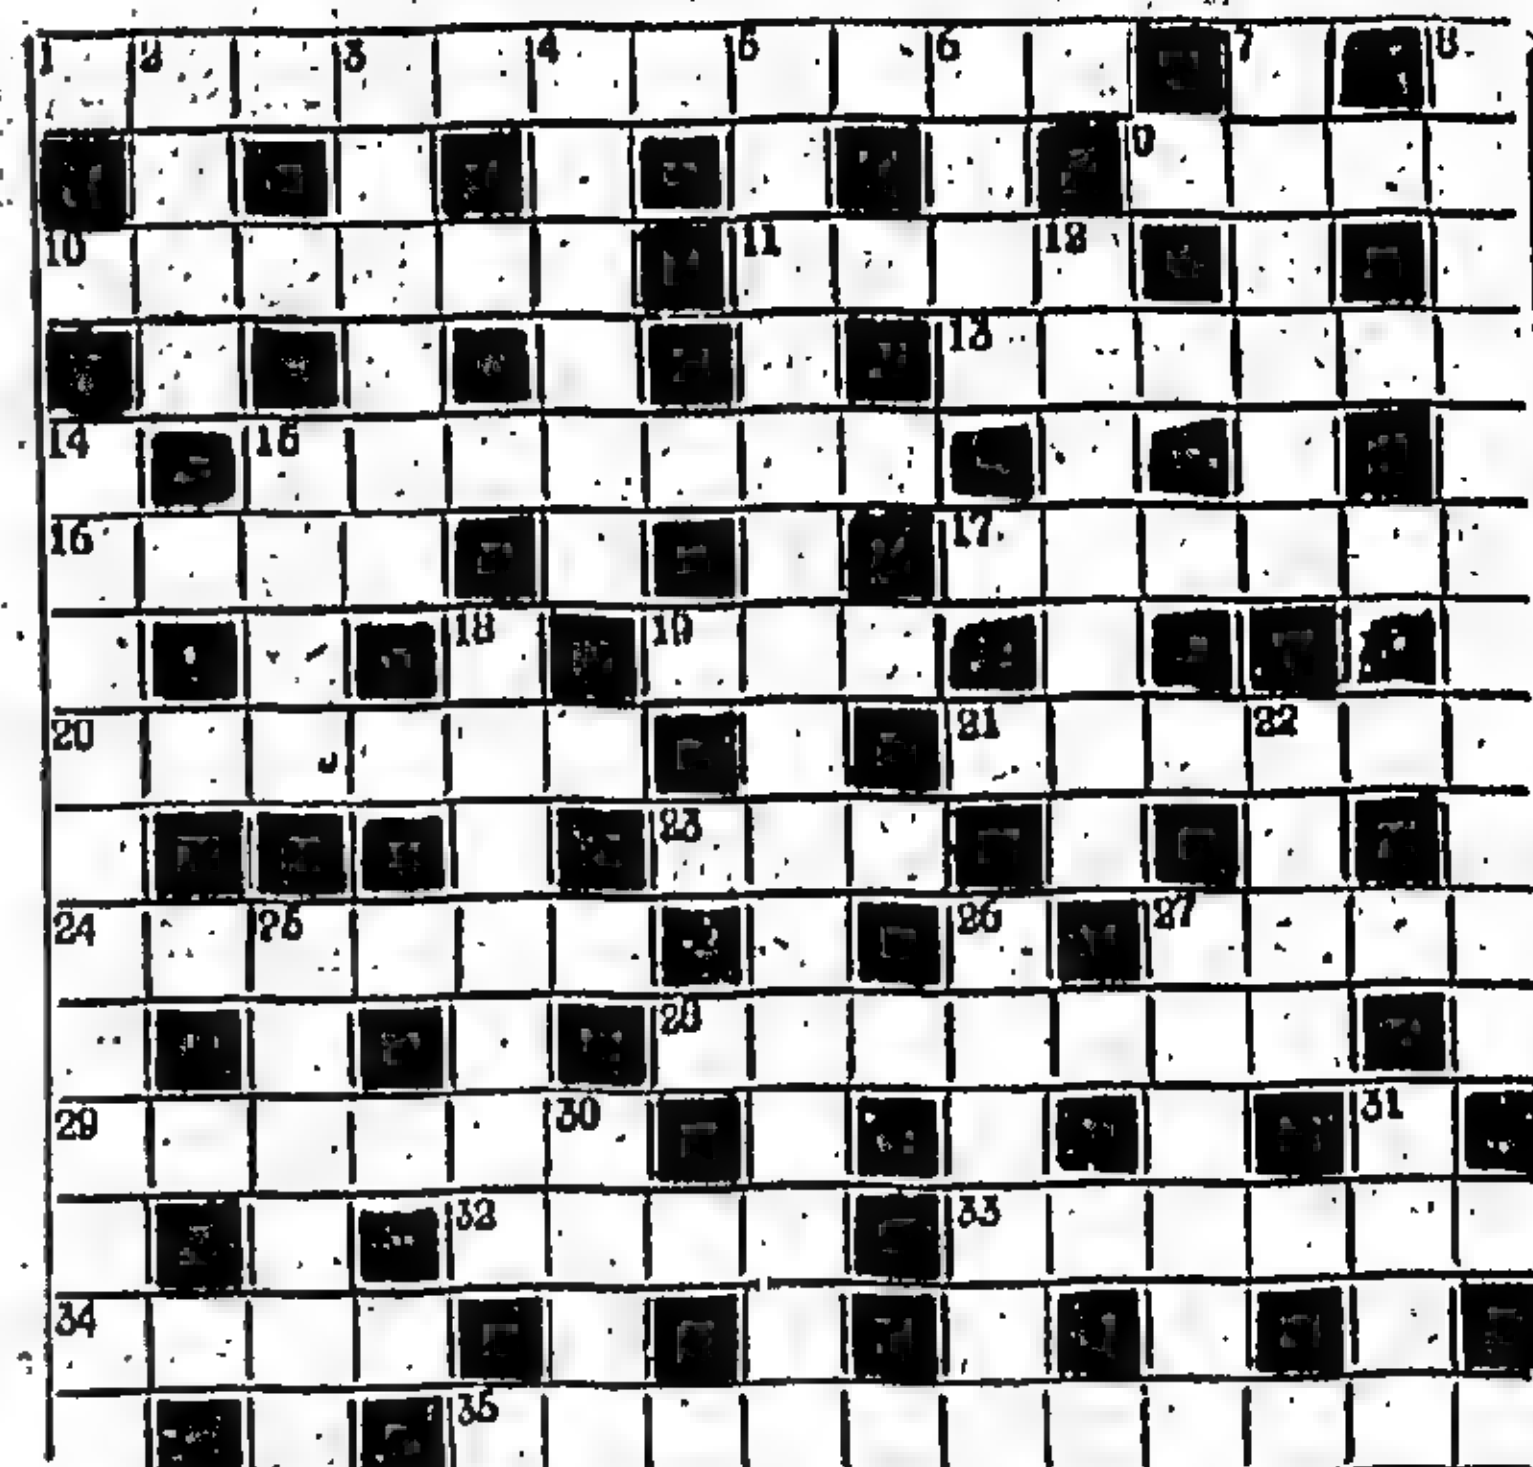

A salmon coloured fine crepe nightie has Alencon lace making a deep V yoke and shoulder arm holes. Then embroidery enriches the gown, done in the floral design of the lace. There's a little sash that ties on one side and the gown just misses the floor.

There is a little matching matinee (fancy for bed jacket) which has the lace applied to make a tiny standup back collar and revers, and all around the sleeves and outer edges, too.

A handsome white slip is very heavily trimmed in lace that makes practically all the part that shows under organdy or other sheer blouses. It is a beautifully fitting garment, with the lace running trickily around it like a bolero. A second slip has less lace adorning it, but the lace and embroidery matches the delicate green of the slip, a new colour for summer underwear.

Panties to match the white slip button up the back, fitting perfectly around the bottom and hips. There is Alencon lace and fine embroidery around the bottom of them, and in Paris manner, the bride, getting them has her initials done in fine handwork on the left side, just above the lace.

CHAPTER XXXVI

Charles' thick letter awaited Monnie at the hotel in London. Curious how her heart leaped at the sight of it. It must be, she told herself, that she expected from Charles some news of Dan. Yes, that was the reason. The square white envelope, the bold, irregular black handwriting were eloquent of Charles' personality. The letter, too, was filled with characteristic phrases.

Miss Anstie's voice aroused her. "I said, my dear, that if we are going to make the Cheshire Cheese for luncheon we'd better hurry. That must be a very fascinating letter. You've read it three times and I've been speaking to you for five minutes without getting your attention."

Monnie blushed. "Fibber! I only just finished reading it the first time."

"Well, anyhow we've got to be starting. I'm perishing for food. The Tower of London was very interesting but I'm a wreck. I said I would do all the tourist things and I'm doing them though it's hard on me."

Monnie tucked Charles' letter in the bottom of her overnight bag among her creams and brushes. He'd said he missed her—but he hadn't said a word about Dan. Gossip about home, about Kay and her mother and the boys. The Watermans had given a party on the 17th and Kay had looked lovely in some yellow thing. Kay and Charles! Well, that would be nice, too. Why did her heart suffer that queer little pang at the thought? It was Dan whom Monnie wanted—Dan whom she loved! Pride was all very well. It sustained you sometimes but not when you were aching desperately for news of the loved one. Why hadn't Charles mentioned Dan? Probably he, like everyone else, thought Monnie had gone away to forget about Dan. Well, everyone was right—only the plan didn't work as well as she'd hoped it would.

"Coming, Miss Anstie!" Monnie crowded her small green hat, the one Miss Anstie had insisted on buying for her in that Bond street place, over her bronze curls. She looked well, she told herself critically. Quite the young-woman-about-London. A year ago if anyone had told her a single one of these fairy-tale happenings were to take place she'd have laughed at him. Well, here she was, thousands of miles away from home, going to smart places, eating rich food, being fêted. Yes, fêted! Hadn't Arthur Mackenzie given a dinner party for her the night before at the Ritz? Wasn't he taking her this very evening to dine and dance at one of the new night places—the Club Cavendish or something like that? Monnie liked Arthur Mackenzie now—wasn't afraid of him any more. Maybe his dark eyes had lost that predatory look which at first had frightened her. He played big brother to her these days. Oh, she knew he was spoiled—she could see that but it didn't matter. He was inclined to pout, quite like a big baby, at the first hint of not getting his own way.

"Women have spoiled me, Monica," he had told her, half laughing, the night before as they danced. "You're the first one who ever kept me from having my own way in all things."

That was funny, Monnie thought—funny that she, a small town girl, should be the one to humble this king of finance. What he had been speaking about in particular was her stubbornness in standing out against him when he'd wanted to buy her that fur wrap yesterday morning. He had come upon her and Miss Anstie, trailing along Bond street looking in this window and that, and had insisted on accompanying them upon the foray to buy the hat.

The mannequin in the fur wrap had strolled past them at Mackenzie's bidding. Monica had crowded softly at sight of the wrap—deep, soft fur, cuddling the thin cheeks of the blond English girl who wore it.

"Splendid for foggy weather, eh?" Mackenzie had asked with a twinkle.

"Oh, excellent for that, sir," the saleswoman had chirped, and the mannequin had given Monnie an onyx sidelong glance.

"Try it on, Monica," the man had urged under Miss Anstie's clear, critical gaze.

"Nonsense." She had been very sturdy about it. "No use making myself unhappy. I should be remembering always how it felt."

He had smiled again at that. "But I'd like you to have it. Little remembrance of this trip." Monica had not needed to look at Miss Anstie to know that the prim little tips were pressed together even more, primly. Her own conscience had risen in protest. "Sorry. I couldn't possibly." She had thought with a flash of amazement that the glance the mannequin gave her held something like contempt.

Afterward Miss Anstie had been downright strange about it. She had said in a dimly regretful tone, "What a pity you couldn't have accepted it from him, Monnie." At the girl's exclamation of surprise she had hastened to add, "Naturally I know you couldn't! But, after all, he's so nice, takes such an interest—and you would have looked so lovely in that. Quite dazzled Belvedere."

Monnie gave the older woman a hug. "Miss Corey, I'm surprised at you!"

"I know. I'm surprised at myself. But I guess I've got my values a bit mixed on this trip. I'm getting soft with so much luxury."

To-night Monnie was dining with Mackenzie alone. Miss Anstie was to go to the theatre with some friends who lived in a flat in Kensington Gardens and Mackenzie was to pick Monnie up at 8. At half past seven she was ready and restless. Miss Anstie, called for early by the Mr. and Mrs. Richardson from Cincinnati, had gone.

The girl strolled to and fro, picking up a magazine, laying it down again. She glanced at the Dresden clock on the mantelpiece. How restless she was! She wished Mackenzie would come. Then she wouldn't have so much time to think about home—about mother and Kay and the boys, to wonder what they were doing. She was a selfish pig to be away from them all, enjoying this luxury. She would have to make it up to them when she got back. But how? Suddenly, like a black vista, the years yawned before Monnie. What was she going to do with her life? With Dan out of it, she seemed aimless—couldn't make plans. She'd devoted heart and soul to him, had wrapped up all her ambitions in him. This was, after all, only an interlude. She'd have to go back home to a dreary, humdrum job and make the most of it. What about her dreams of doing something splendid for her mother and the rest? She'd never be able to.

She wrapped the dark velvet cloak around her as the pleasant British voice on the telephone announced Mackenzie's arrival.

"You look lovely, as always." He was bowing over her hand. She was whisked into the inevitably luxurious motor car that always attended this man's comings and goings. A soft rug was tucked around her feet. Mackenzie spoke through a tube and the motor purred noiselessly. The car slid forward. Fog held the night without but in the small intimacy of the car the two people sat, warm and enclosed.

"You'll like this place to-night, Monica." He had a pleasant voice, she reflected. Deep and resonant. "That's one of the many things I like about you," he continued with gravity. "Your youthful enthusiasm. I've known so many faded people—sated with life. With you everything's new."

"That's because I haven't been any place before," the girl told him without self-consciousness.

As they sat down at the candle-light table with an obsequious pair of waiters hovering in attendance, she returned his smile with one of honest liking. How nice this man had been to her! Last night at the party Corinth Faneway had said to her with a curious high laugh, "Artie's taken a great fancy to you. Make the most of it."

And when Monnie had looked at her curiously the other girl had cried, gratingly, "Oh, don't be a little fool. He's all right, Artie is."

It must be true—the gossip she'd heard—that Corinth and Mackenzie had been in love with each other although he was almost twice her age. But she was married to someone else now. It didn't seem to matter. "If I'd ever cared for anyone like that," thought Monnie, "I should hate the thought of giving him up to someone else." Suddenly she realized that Mackenzie was studying her intently.

"What is it?" he asked.

"I've a bit of news for you, Monica."

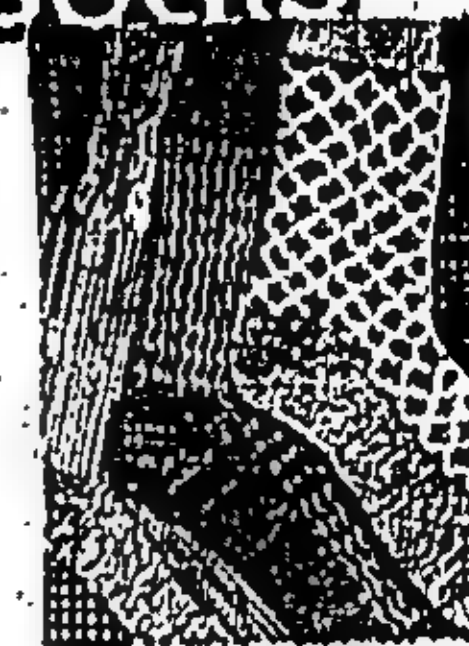

Why did her heart beat faster at the tone?

"I've got to leave to-morrow. Got a cable from the office this afternoon."

"Oh, I'm sorry!" It was true. She would miss this man and his many kindnesses. He stared at her. "Monnie, I wonder—I want you to come back with me!"

10 YEAR PLAN FOR INDIA*AN AMBITIOUS PROJECT*BY MADRAS GOVT.

Bombay. The Government of Madras are considering schemes for the constitution of an Electricity Board and for a Ten Year Plan for the development of hydro-electric schemes in the Presidency for the establishment of an Electricity Grid from Madras, in the north to Rameshwaram, in the south, and from the east coast to the west.

The Pykara scheme, the first attempt by the Madras govt. in the field of hydro-electricity, has now been successfully completed at a cost of nearly £75,000 and it will supply power to the western districts of the presidency. Government have now on hand the Mettur Project. Detailed plans have been submitted to Government experts of this scheme which is estimated to cost about £1,000,000, and which when completed will supply power to seven central districts. This scheme is expected to be completed by 1936.

OTHER SCHEMES.

Following its completion the government propose to undertake another scheme—the Periyar Scheme—which will supply power to the southern districts and which will take, it is estimated, not less than five years for completion. The cost will be about £1,500,000. Simultaneous with these schemes are schemes for intensive agricultural development and village reconstruction.

Electric plants, agricultural implements, and all other machinery in connection with these schemes will be ordered it is understood, through the High Commissioner in London and the orders will be placed with British firms.—Reuter.

ALLEGED ROBBERY
BY A TRICK.*DOUGLAS GIFFORD TO STAND TRIAL AT SESSIONS

Douglas Gifford, aged 38 years, an unemployed Eurasian was committed for trial by Mr. Wynne-Jones, at the Central Police Court yesterday afternoon, on a charge of theft of £60 from a Chinese married woman, by means of a trick, at the General Post Office. Inspector M. Murphy, of the C. I. D. conducted the prosecution. Gifford called no witnesses, and made no statement when cautioned by the magistrate before committing.

Tara Khan, a Police Reservist and chauffeur in the employ of Mr. A. L. Brusset, manager of the Banque Franco-Chinoise, was committed by Mr. Wynne-Jones for good work in connection with the arrest of the accused in Chater Road.

The victim, Ho Luk, told the Court that she lived at 412, Shanghai Street, second floor. On July 12 she went with her aunt to the G.P.O. for $60 which had been sent her from her husband in Wai-haiwei. It was a cash postal order. Gifford, wearing a dark felt hat, was standing at the counter. She asked him, "Sir, is this the post office?" and he replied "Yes," and inquired of her business. Her husband's chop and the chop of the Kwan On Motor Transportation were produced by witness, and the money was handed over to her friend who in turn gave it to her. Gifford suggested checking over the numbers on the notes, a $50 and a $10 note. He directed them to go to the first floor of the building. He told them to stand aside, and they waited for about three minutes, but Gifford failed to return. They reported at the Post Office, and were informed they had been defrauded. They then went to Central Police Station. The following day, they went again to the Station and in the detective office saw Gifford seated. After a G.P.O. clerk had given testimony, Tara Khan stated that, in consequence of a Police message he searched for Gifford. He met him in Chater Road on July 13 and asked defendant, "How are you? Where are you going?" Gifford replied "I have just returned from Canada. Can you lend me ten or twenty dollars?" Witness suggested going to the Post Office and defendant refused. He arrested defendant and took him to Headquarters.

Magistrate (to witness)—Thank you. You did a good piece of work. Complainant's aunt bore out her story, after which Insp. Murphy testified to charging the defendant. In reply to the charge, Gifford said "I am not guilty."

Defendant contended he offered to change the notes and not to check over the numbers. This the witness denied.

NANKING CALLS FOR TRUCE*JAPANESE COUNTER OFFENSIVE

An official communique issued to-day states that reliable information received from the North is to the effect that the Kwantung Army command has decided to send 20,000 Manchukuo troops and the main part of the Japanese Eighth Division, to retake Dolonor.

The communique adds: "The recent developments in the dispute between the North China authorities and Feng Yu-hsiang show no sign of a rapid settlement."—Reuter.

ARMISTICE PLEA.

Nanking, July 18. Marshal Chiang Kai-shek is about to call another important conference at Kuling, in Kiangsi, to deal with the rapid developments in Dolonor and Kalgan, where Feng Yu-hsiang has shown further determination to renew hostilities on a big scale against Manchukuo, despite Chiang Kai-shek's warnings. The conference is expected to open on Thursday.

It is learned from official circles that Nanking is ready to make new concessions to Feng Yu-hsiang, asking him to stop his warfare in Chahar.

The military quarrels in Sinkiang and Szechuan will also be dealt with at the same conference.

Mr. H. H. Kung, the prominent Chiang Kai-shek partisan, returned here yesterday from Shanghai and will accompany Mr. Wang Ching-wei to Kuling, while General Huang Fu has also been summoned from Peking for this Kiangsi conference.—Reuter.

CO-OPERATION NEEDED.

Nanking, July 17. General Li Tu, the Kirin volunteer leader, arrived here this morning and called on Mr. Wang Ching-wei.

General Li Tu, who arrived from Shanghai, was met at the station by several military officials. When interviewed the General appealed to all sections of the nation to combine their strength and tackle the crisis facing the country. He said that he would confer with the Central Government regarding the disposition of his troops in North China.

Regarding Marshal Feng Yu-hsiang's activities, General Li Tu said that he believed the Marshal would respect the wishes of the Central Government.—Reuter.

BREAK FROM CHIEF.

Peking, July 17. Reliable Chinese sources state that seventeen subordinate officers of General Li Chi-chun are dissatisfied with the terms he has negotiated concerning his men. These officers have refused to obey orders and have concentrated their men at Tangshan for re-organisation.—Reuter.

DELEGATES LEAVING.THREE QUARTERS OF AGENDA
SHELVED BY CONFERENCE

London, July 18. Liquidation of the Economic Conference proceeds apace, with sub-committees hatching several formal reports from which emerges the fact that three-quarters of the questions on the agenda have been shelved until the prospects of an agreement on currency stabilisation are brighter.

Delegates are already preparing to go home and the League Secretariat has been reduced to the minimum.

Senator Couzens is leaving on Thursday and the remainder of the American delegation hopes to sail on July 27, immediately after the conclusion of the plenary session.

Britain Complimented.

The Committee on External Indebtedness has presented a report in which it compliments Great Britain for paying her debts and upholds the sanctity of contracts which should only be revised bilaterally and urges creditor nations to facilitate payment in services and goods.

One notch of progress was registered to-day when an agreement was reached with the Danubian countries with regard to restriction of wheat exports; the amount agreed upon being 64,000,000 bushels for the first year and 50,000,000 for the second year of a two-year agreement. The figure for the past three years has been 53,800,000 bushels. Attention is now being concentrated upon an agreement with Soviet Russia.

Final Arrangements.

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald presided at the meeting of the Steering Committee this afternoon where final arrangements for the adjournment of the Conference were discussed. The names of the speakers for the final plenary session were also considered, together with the nature of the reports of the Economic and Monetary Commissions, which will be published.—Reuter.

PLANT DISEASES TOLL*$12,000,000 LOST EVERY YEAR TO AUSTRALIA*HUGE PROBLEM

Sydney, N.S.W. No less than $12,000,000 is lost annually to Australia through the toll of plant diseases, the Council for Scientific and Industrial Research reveals in its sixth annual report.

To reduce this enormous debit is one of the council's major problems, says the report.

Investigating bunchy top in bananas, the council made recommendations which were followed up by the New South Wales and Queensland Agricultural Departments. "The banana industry," the report says, "has now been successfully re-established in these States."

The entomology division of the Council has been responsible for numerous attacks on weed plants by certain insects.

An officer of the Council in the United States discovered a fly which attacks Noogoora Burr, a weed which already covers thousands of acres in Queensland and is spreading at an alarming rate.

Several consignments of that fly were sent to Australia from the U.S.A., and after it was found that they would not attack any plants of economic value, were released in Queensland.

INSECTS IMPORTED.

Insects imported from Europe to destroy St. John's Wort did not meet with such success. They were vigorously attacked by meat ants, ground spiders, and other enemies, but they will be tried out on higher localities.

The council announces the discovery of an effective vaccine against black disease of sheep, which, it is estimated, will save Australia £1,000,000 annually.

The Council is now working to avert the buffalo-fly menace by introducing insect parasites to attack the fly early in its life-history.

The report points out that during the last year it commenced a division in box and crate testing. The importance of this to Australia is indicated by the disclosure that 50,000,000 of these containers are used for internal use, and from 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 are exported.—Reuter.

UNIFYING CHINA.CONSTRUCTION PLANS FOR NATIONS

Nanking, July 17. Mr. Wang Ching-wei speaking at this morning's weekly memorial meeting of the Executive Yuan declared that the Government's policy hereafter was to be directed towards the unification of the country through construction.

He recalled the recent statement issued by Mr. T. V. Soong in which the Finance Minister announced that only seven provinces, Kiangsu, Chekiang, Hopei, Anhui, Honan, Hupeh and Hunan, were handing over revenues collected in those territories to the Central Government. Meanwhile over half a million troops in Szechuen were fighting against each other. In the past the Government had attempted unification through military force, which had always failed.

Mr. Wang Ching-wei stated that hereafter the Government would devote its energy to construction work in the seven above-mentioned provinces, with the hope that other provinces will gradually follow the example of the Provinces that are remitting revenue.—Reuter.

PEKING DEATH.FORMER MINISTER TO JAPAN PASSES

Peking, July 18. Mr. Wang Yung-pao, former Chinese Minister to Japan, who returned to China after the anti-Chinese riots in Korea in 1931, died suddenly to-day at the age of 57.

The cause of death was heart failure.—Reuter.

GENERAL HO'S ILLNESS.

War Minister Suffering From Pneumonia.

Peking, July 18. General Ho Ying-ching, Minister for War, is suffering from pneumonia and is being treated at the German Hospital. Dr. Stickforth, attending him, says he will have recovered in about two weeks, but at present he is allowed to do no work.—Reuter.

OPIUM RINGEZRA EXONERATES TWIN BROTHER

San Francisco, July 18. Judah Ezra, formerly a millionaire resident of Shanghai, who pleaded guilty on July 6 to violation of the U. S. Narcotic Laws, has made a statement to the U. S. Attorney in San Francisco, exonerating his brother, Isaac.

At the same time Ezra has named Allan Zimmerman, of Shanghai, as his real accomplice.

Zimmerman is still residing in Shanghai, and in a statement to-day, the U. S. Attorney said that an attempt would be made to extradite and prosecute him.

Zimmerman, together with Judah and Isaac Ezra, Leong Chung, Y. T. Kong, and Paul Yih, was named in the original indictment.

Mrs. Judah Ezra has been notified that she has overstayed her Visitor's Permit, and unless she voluntarily departs from the United States, she will be deported.—Reuter.

History of Seizure.

Not only Judah, but his twin brother, Isaac Ezra, pleaded guilty to violation of the Narcotic Laws when arraigned at San Francisco on July 6.

They were arrested following the discovery of a large consignment of drugs aboard the N. Y. K. liner, Asama Maru. The drugs were concealed in oil drums.

The American authorities are satisfied that by the capture of Judah Ezra they have broken into one of the biggest dope-running rings operating in the Far East and the United States.

Sentence upon the two brothers was postponed until September 2, pending the receipt of further information from the Orient regarding the smuggling ring of which the Ezras are alleged to be the heads.

The Assistant Attorney said that the brothers had furnished the police with valuable information which would aid the Government to eradicate the ring's activities.

Judah Ezra admitted that he had amassed a considerable fortune. Raw opium and the derivatives of opium had been imported into America in large quantities disguised as tea and other packed and canned products.

Fake commercial firms were in existence, he admitted, for handling the consignments. Over $50,000 of drugs were found concealed in Ezra's home in San Francisco, where he had been apparently operating as a real estate agent.

SECRET PRESERVED.PLANS FOR ANTI-WAR
PARLEY IN SHANGHAI

Shanghai, July 17. The utmost secrecy surrounds the preparations in connection with the convocation of the World Anti-War Conference to be here held in August.

Though it is learned that Madame Sun Yat-sen has been made Honorary Chairman of the Conference, she refuses to divulge any information and has been refusing to see Press representatives.

The date and place of the Conference are not yet decided. August previously announced is unlikely owing to the inability of the delegates to arrive in Shanghai before that date. The French delegate, it is understood, has arrived already, but his whereabouts is not known.—Reuter.

FATAL BALCONY COLLAPSE

The painstaking inquiry into the fatal balcony collapse at Yuk Sau Street terminated in a manner which can only be described as unsatisfactory and as leaving behind a number of reflections disturbing to public complacency. While a measure of reluctance can be understood, it is a matter for regret that the jury should have chosen to be non-committal when the evidence left little room for doubt as to the facts and still less for confusion. The balcony was designed and approved as a cantilevered slab, as were all others in the building. This design was comparatively new to the Colony and involved the laying of steel-work on principles basically new to the workmen and, apparently, to the foremen. Essential to the stability of these balconies was the laying of steel rods and beam stirrups at the top of the slab. In every case, they were found at the bottom, with the result that designed to carry 6,000 pounds, their strength, in the opinion of the expert witness, was precisely nothing. It was impossible to accept any theory suggesting that the rods and the stirrups found their way to the bottom by accident. The inference is that they were so placed by workmen who did not know better, or who given specific instructions regarding the laying, thought they knew better than their instructor because they had done previous jobs, of another design, differently. But because the principles were new, because there was this liability to the assumption of better knowledge by Chinese workmen and because a similarly designed balcony in the same street had collapsed earlier, a greater responsibility rested upon those who understood the importance of meticulous attention to correct laying and were expected to see that it was properly carried out before the concrete was poured. Two persons lost their lives because this was not done. The jury do suggest in their findings that measures should be taken to see that such an accident shall not occur again in consequence of a lack of proper supervision. But that is as far as they go. Let this, they say in effect, be the last of laissez faire. To our mind, the jury's findings thereby give an incomplete impression of the seriousness of the event. We can only hope that it has not also escaped the attention of those with power to exercise control.

NOTES OF THE DAY

The cabaret question takes on a new aspect in view of the uncompromising refusal of the police to modify their arbitrary curfew hour. The inference is that the authorities responsible for the decision are not amenable to reason and that the dancing establishments must find their own remedy. It is very unfortunate that some arrangement cannot be reached between the police and the proprietors, because the restrictions, insofar as they affect the city establishments, are unduly onerous and exceed all requirements. There was, for instance, more than humour behind the question asked by Robert McWhirter in the Post this morning: "Where do our young lads get to of a night-time these days? We have heard much talk during the cabaret controversy regarding public morals and so forth. It might even be, contrary to most of the submissions made, that the diversion provided by cabarets could be regarded as a social asset. Meanwhile, an enquiry has been made regarding the source of the powers taken by the police to impose the curfew. It is suggested that a test case might prove interesting."

SILVER STRUGGLE

After a fortnight of concentrated effort with success apparently always looming nearer, Senator Pittman's scheme for the rehabilitation of silver has received a succession of cold douches. The hope of an agreed programme receded very definitely with the refusal of other power to promise support to the signatories of the proposed Eight-Power Agreement. Since then, Mr. Pittman has been seeking a compromise and clearly it is only enthusiasm that has kept him going. As fast as he placates one party, fresh objections are raised by another. First Holland, then Britain and then Spain, none of them really vitally concerned except indirectly, provided new hitches. When he has gone the rounds, he will probably have to begin all over again. Senator Pittman has not given up hope, but optimism has gone.

OH NEPTUNE!

The old Gulf Stream, which has been sneaking home after dark in its stocking feet, has been caught at it. For years this warm-hearted old traveller has been giving the oceanographers and other interested parties an impression that it strolled leisurely up America's Atlantic coast, crossed over to the British Isles and went to bed possibly somewhere in the arctic regions. But detectives have been on its trail and they have picked up enough clues to satisfy themselves that the wily old stream is a regular rounder. They have learned that it undoubtedly makes a circular tour of the Atlantic Ocean and returns to its home in the Gulf of Mexico. Wiggle as it might, the Gulf Stream was unable to shake off the relentless eye of the oceanographer which parked on its tail and followed it around the island of Spitzbergen, down through the North Sea, into the English Channel and out again, down to the west coast of Africa and across the Atlantic to the Caribbean Sea and home. A pretty little piece of detective work and one that should bring the villain to the bar of justice as the head and tail of Neptune's greatest ring.

BREAKABLE BABIES

Of the many children who enter slumberland through that dreamy portal called Lullaby, at least a few must acquire a deep perplexity. "Rock a bye, baby, on the tree top," is of itself a suggestion with a charming prospect. But the subsequent warning—"If the bough breaks the cradle will fall"—must seem ill-calculated to usher a baby into a state of restful quietude. Especially since babies have been declared "breakable," does the inappropriateness of the line appear. But it should not be supposed that the theory of destructibility as it concerns babyhood condemns such gentle practices as rocking and even tossing the child. Records of babies rocked and tossed prove that the long list of "dents" in this connection may be ignored, according to Dr. W. C. Bentley of America. Of course, when you toss the tot, you must do it with a certain amount of technique, never forgetting that how and where the baby lands is an important point to consider. As for rocking the baby, most parents will agree that the really important thing in this process is to be reasonably sure that it is the child who is falling asleep.

BRITAIN IS FINDING FAITH AGAIN

By G. WARD PRICE

Is it possible that, amid all the anxieties and perplexities of our public affairs, a great revival of Christianity is on the way? In other parts of the English-speaking world certain signs suggest strongly that a new religious movement has begun. For the last quarter of a century it has been a commonplace assertion in this country that we are growing more and more godless. That statement is based upon the change in the habits of religious observance which every Briton who has reached middle age has witnessed in his or her lifetime. It is a fact that, in areas where regular records of church attendance are kept, the decline in the number of churchgoers in the past fifty years amounts in some cases to 50 per cent.

Those of us who were children at the beginning of this century can remember that anyone in those days who did not go to church at least once on Sunday was regarded almost as a social outcast. To read novels or newspapers, play games or sing secular songs on Sunday seemed to the generation that immediately preceded ours to be a definite breach of the law of God. Even people who were brought up in this atmosphere have difficulty to-day in understanding the earnest convictions that used to inspire such a horror of the sin of "Sabbath-breaking." There can be no doubt that the nation is healthier and happier for having made Sunday a day of public recreation. I myself doubt very much whether its religious faith has been in any way diminished by that change.

The truth is that religion is largely a matter of temperament, and that few nations are temperamentally more devout than the British. Their principles are none the less strong for being masked under conventional disguises. The easiest Christian precept for the average Briton to obey is the one which warns against a Pharisaic display of piety. But the British ideals represented by such terms as "decency" or "playing the game" are directly inspired by the Golden Rule of the Christian faith: Do unto others as ye would that they should do unto you.

To the foreign visitors, of whom so many are over here just now, the external appearance of England may indeed suggest indifference to religion. In our cathedrals they find many sightseers, but fewer worshippers than one sees in the great shrines of other European countries. Yet the speech of even the roughest class of Briton is free from the blasphemous oaths that similar people in some other countries commonly employ, and public opinion here would never tolerate the irreverent cartoons and anti-Christian jokes that are to be found from time to time in sections of the Continental Press.

But though the dominant British qualities of shyness and reserve apply to our religious instincts as to many other aspects of our lives, there is no nation that devotes more serious individual thought to religious matters. The multiplicity of British sects and denominations is evidence of the deep attention paid by the people of this country to questions of Christian practice and doctrine. And at regular intervals throughout our history this underlying foundation of belief rises to the surface. The instinctive restraints and inhibitions that prevent us in normal times from even discussing questions of religion, except in very intimate company, disappear, and a "religious revival," as we call it, sweeps across the land.

The first great English revivalist was John Wycliffe, who lived 600 years ago. In those days religion was standardised under the undisputed authority of the Church of Rome. It required a courage almost beyond our comprehension to challenge that authority, as Wycliffe did, by denouncing the abuses that had crept into the priesthood. But he aroused an immediate response from the people of this country. Though the Church then possessed considerable judicial power, which it tried to use by arraigning him on charges of heresy, the Bishops could not prevail against the popular support which Wycliffe found among all classes from the humblest peasant to that all-but-royal nobleman, John of Gaunt. It was not till forty-five years after his death that his remains were disinterred and burnt by the Pope's order, but by that time the Wycliffe movement had prepared the way for the English Reformation.

Two hundred years ago another great impetus was given to the religious life of this country by John Wesley. Like Wycliffe, Wesley began his revivalist campaign at Oxford. That University has always been a fertile seed-bed for the flowering of religious faith.

As in the case to-day, the England of the eighteenth century seemed sunk in cynicism and indifference. The Established Church was full of scandals. Many vicars held several livings, and were hardly ever seen in any one of them. Bishops neglected their dioceses. Slackness, formalism and dissipation were widespread among the clergy. To combat this state of things, Wesley formed a group of Oxford students, who took the name of the Methodists and undertook itinerant tours of preaching. Then he, with his brother Charles, the hymn-writer, and Charles Whitefield, the great preacher, moved to London and devoted themselves to a national campaign of revival, the effects of which have never passed away.

This month there is being celebrated the centenary of yet another of these mighty periods of stirring of the religious belief that may slumber deeply but never dies in the hearts of the British people. It was known as the Oxford Movement, and was associated with such great figures as Pusey, Keble and Newman, who later joined the Roman Catholic Church and became a Cardinal. Profoundly as their activities divided the Church of England for a time, the vitalising effect of their zeal was unmistakable.

Many people still living can remember the enthusiasm with which the American revivalists Moody and Sankey were received in this country during the last quarter of the nineteenth century. Moody was a layman, but a forceful preacher. His companion, Ira D. Sankey, was a singer, who used to lead the vast meetings they held in the singing of hymns which have since become familiar to the whole British people. When I was crossing Canada a

The Very Idea!

PROTOGRAMS

By Ed. Kelly, Rahl Rahl Rahl

PROTOGRAMMIC and Telescopmic words are being added to the American dictionaries.

For instance, a Proto-gram is a word that is made up from initial letters, such as "Nep", which means in Russia the New Economic Policy. The other day we had "Wec", meaning the World Economic Conference.

Telescopmic words are a combination of abbreviated words, such as "SOCONY", which means "Standard Oil Company of New York."

All right, let's have it. Think what a saving of time, paper, and labour it would mean. The Hongkong Government—pardon, the Hovog—could explain their whole policy with regard to the Cabaret question by one word, "nocabs."

All we'd have to say every time the shroffs came would be "Goonbikyoy." They'd instantly know that it meant "Get Out Of Here Before I Kick You Out."

Then think of the convenience of reading in the newspaper, "Hob-sells Beer at Half a Bab", instead of the long-winded "Hongkong Brewery sells Beer at Half a Buck a Bottle". Think of it. Think of the beer at half a buck a bottle. Lead us to it.

Americans, of course, can be relied upon to reduce this new language to a fine scale. Picking up their newspaper, Americans of the future will read, "Demhugbrop blaskhorb," and will know from long habit that it means "Demands hundred grand for breach of promise; blonde asks heart balm."

Going to the telephone in his difficult moments, the Hongkong business talpan could give his reason for not going home with the single word "latofeen" meaning "staying late at office for conference."

Such protogrammic words as Cif, E&OE and IOU are too well known to need mention here. But a lot of Hongkong people will have to prepare for "Ita in Swam", meaning, of course, "If this account is not settled within a month."

On second thoughts, though, we think we'll stick to our good old English. We've got to fill this column up every day.

MUSIC HATH CHARMS.

He was a careful burglar. He had watched the house patiently for weeks, until he learned for certain that the family had gone for an extensive holiday.

It was a pleasant prospect; he could loot at his leisure.

Dawdling from room to room he thought he might as well have some music. So he turned on the wireless.

As he chose his loot with inherent art, some old-fashioned airs wafted gently from the loud speaker, "Genevieve, Sweet Genevieve."

The burglar thought it rather nice. He sat down on the couch and listened while they played. "Mother Machree." Tears came to his eyes. Tears of shame. "The silver that shines in your hair." He choked as the song ebbed to completion. His mother! He could not but think of her, how she nursed him when he was a little chap.

Slowly he rose to his feet, picked up the bag of loot, emptied everything out on the floor. He took the wireless set instead!

Arthur Appel wrote a novel. Benjamin Beck dramatized it. Charles Cook made a photoplay of the drama. Dorothy Dale novelized the picture.

Edward Entz dramatized the novelization.

George Gallifry wrote a short story from the picture.

Helen Hqoker made a radio sketch from the short story.

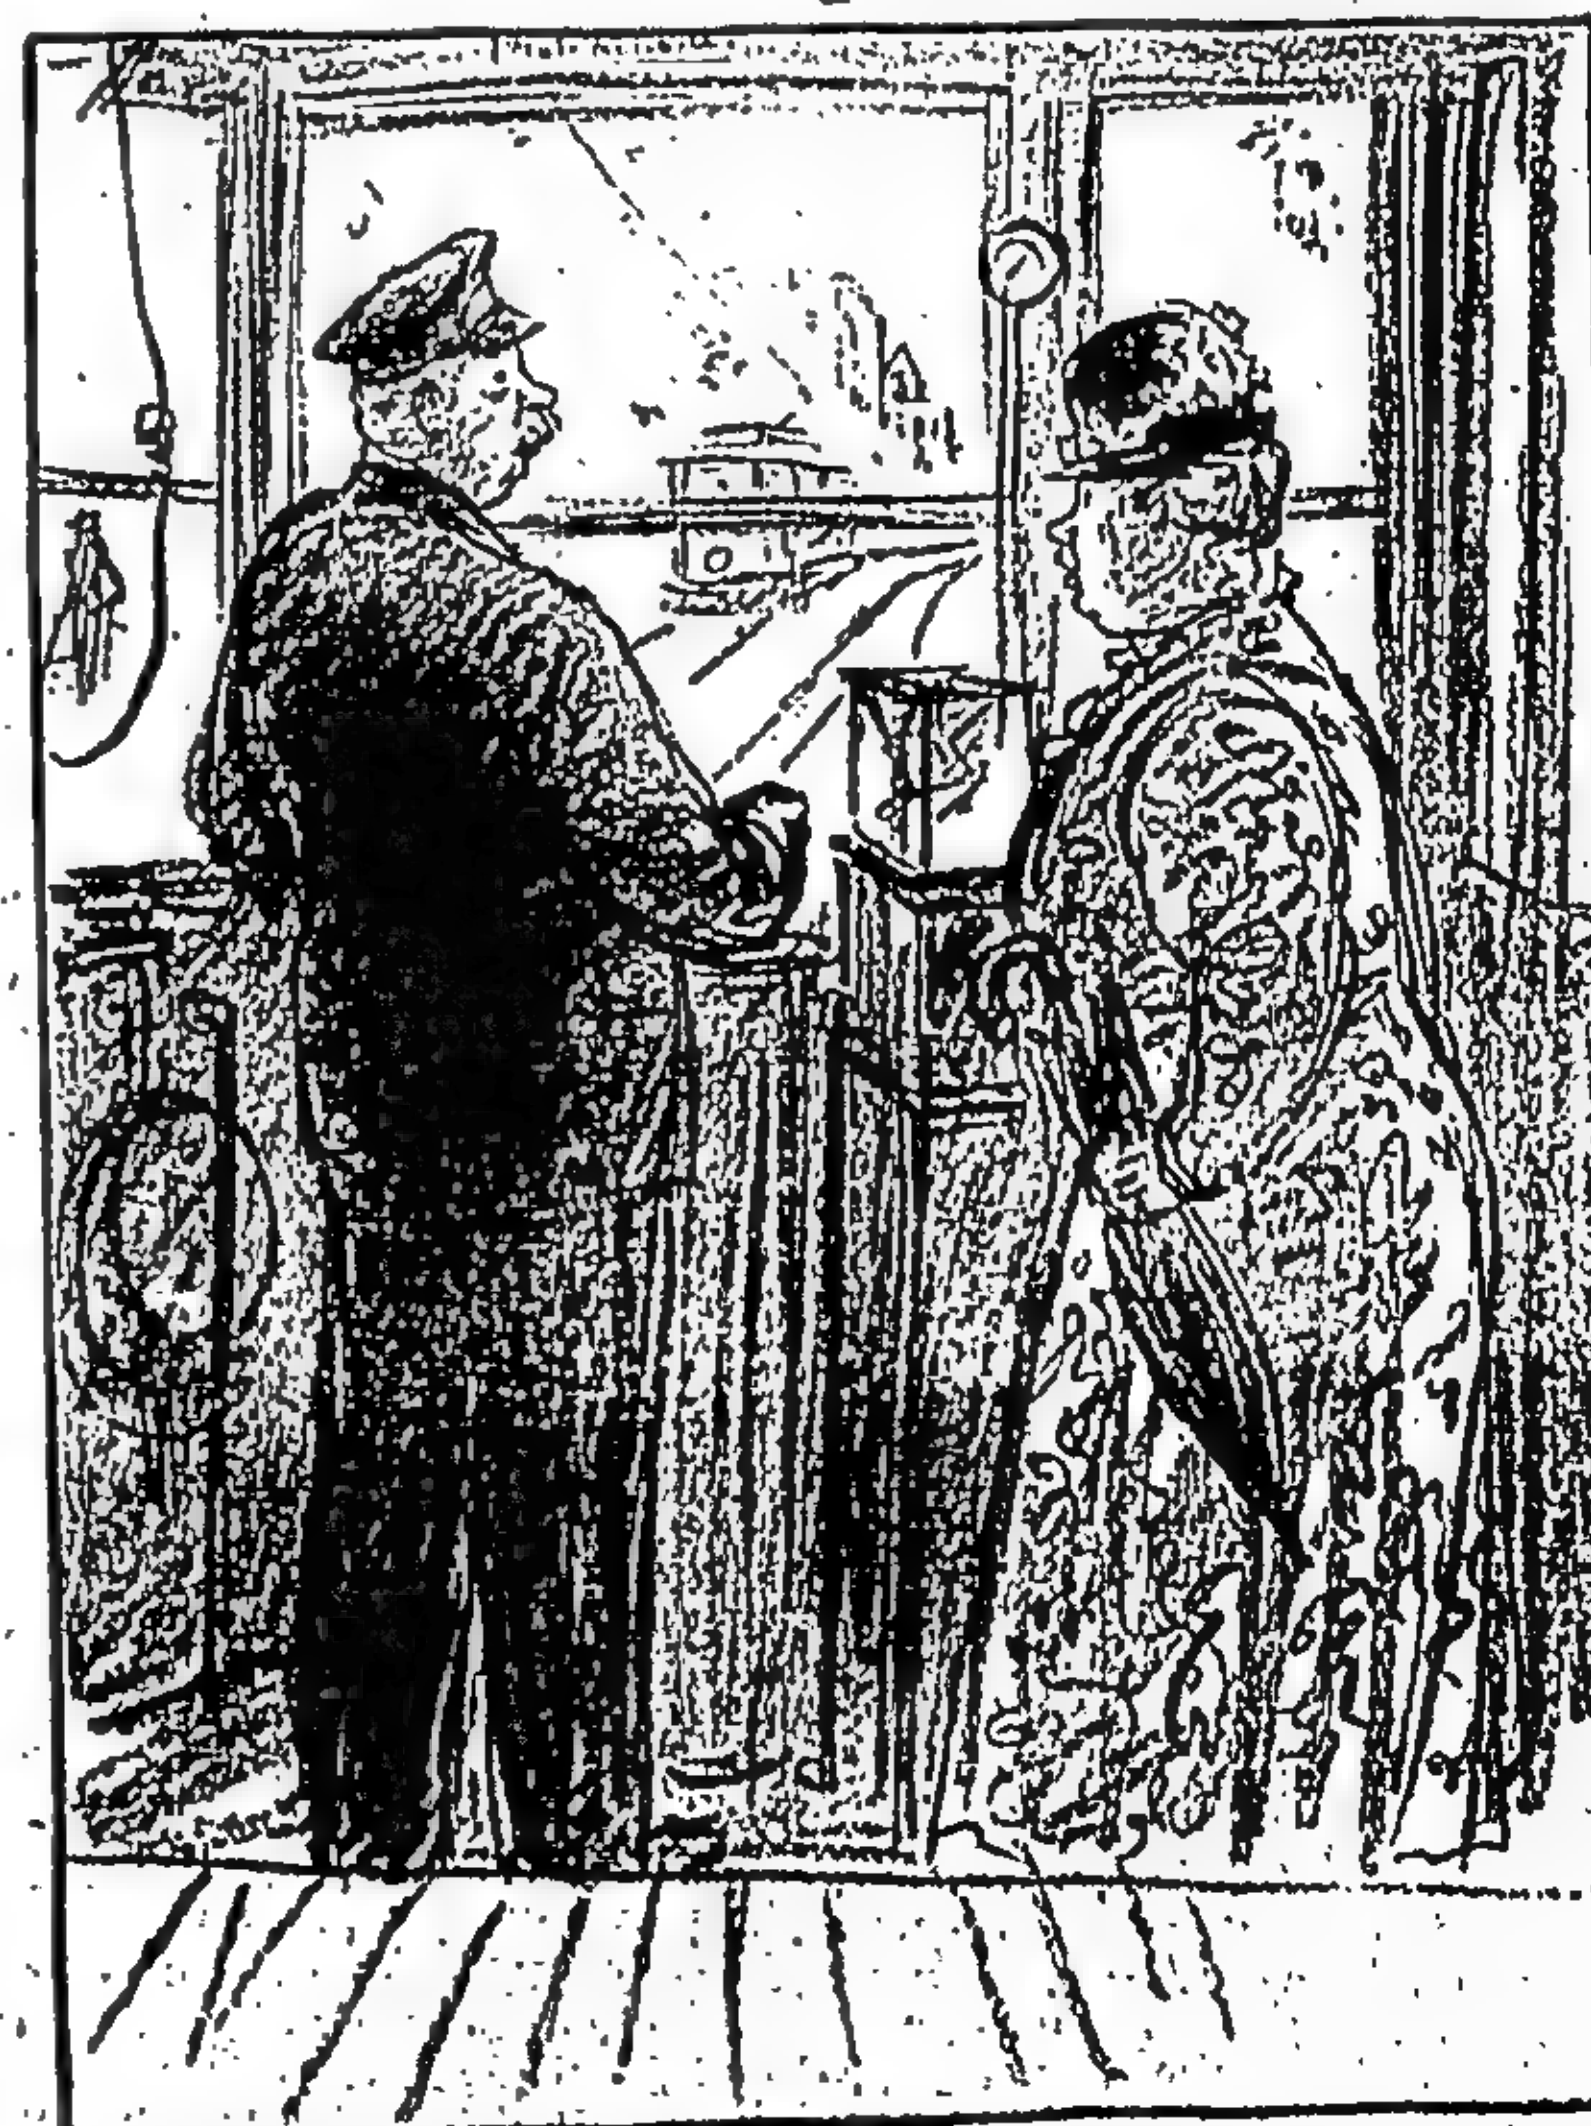

Arthur Appel heard the radio sketch and wrote a novel.

Benjamin Beck dramatized it.

Charles Cook made a television of the dramatization.

George Gallifry sued Charles Cook for plagiarism. Arthur Appel sued George Gallifry. Benjamin Beck sued Edward Entz.

And that, sirs, is how we came to Hongkong to make a Roman holiday!

LATEST ADVENTURES OF FAMOUS BANKER

TWICE JUMPS INTO RIVER

TAKEN TO HOSPITAL BY TAXI-DRIVER

MARCH CRISIS ECHOES

New York, July 18. Mr. Joseph Harriman, the New York banker, provided a fresh sensation to-day when he voluntarily returned to the nursing home from which he disappeared yesterday.

Just previously an application had been made in court for the issue of a warrant for his arrest, while his bail of $25,000 was ordered to be forfeited.

Mr. Harriman returned to the sanatorium in a taxi-cab.

Questioned by the police, the driver of the taxi, said that Harriman hailed him in the street, near the Hudson River and told him that he had just climbed out of the river.

SOAKING WET.

The banker's clothes were soaking wet, confirming his own story. He asked the driver to take him to the sanatorium and to hurry.

The police, making enquiries, received further information to the effect that Harriman twice tried to commit suicide by jumping into the river, but each time he appeared to change his mind after finding himself struggling in the water.

It will be recalled that in May last, following his arrest in March for alleged false entries in his books intended to deceive the Comptroller of Currency, Mr. Harriman, who was in hospital for heart and nervous troubles, made his escape and was subsequently found in an hotel, where he had registered in an assumed name, with a stab wound in the body.

SPECTACULAR CAREER.

The banker rose spectacularly to prominence in the financial world of the United States.

Nephew of the famous railway magnate, E. H. Harriman, at the age of 16 he began as a bank clerk and at 35 was a vice-president of the Merchants' National. In 1902 he entered the firm of Harriman and Company, founded by his brother and father and also became President of the Night and Day Bank. In 1911 the Night and Day Bank became the Harriman National, with J. W. Harriman still President.

UNUSUAL ACTIONS.

Some unusual actions are credited to Harriman. In 1923 he horrified Wall Street and elated the working class by lending $100,000 to the United Mine Workers. Commenting on this action, the American Federationist said: "There are constructive minds and honourable characters in all walks of life."

In 1924 he retired from Harriman and Company; in 1927 he erected a new building for his bank on Fifth Avenue. The Harriman Estate retired from the bank and Joseph Wright Harriman became the Harriman of Harriman National. In July of 1932 he was elected chairman of the Bank's directors.

BANK CRISIS.

The downfall came in the banking crisis in March.

The warrant on which Harriman was arrested accused him of misappropriating over $300,000 of his depositors' funds. The charges, as developed by the United States Attorney, outlined a far larger story: that following the stock market crash of 1929, Harriman had made an attempt to maintain the price of his bank's stock. He actually succeeded in maintaining the price in the vicinity of $1,350 until April, 1932.

About that time the U. S. Attorney began his investigations, fruit of which was the charge that Harriman had used $1,061,170 of the $25,000,000 of deposits in the bank to maintain the price of the bank stock.—Reuter.

RECONSTRUCTION IN GERMANY

HITLER'S ADDRESS TO NAZI LEADERS

TO RESTORE ORDER

Berlin, July 14. A strong speech was made last night by Herr Adolf Hitler, the German Chancellor, before an assembly of Nazi leaders, on constructive work. The address lasted for 2½ hours, but only extracts of it have been published by the Nazi Press Bureau.

The Chancellor began by saying that these revolutionary times, in which Germans are now living, would prove a blessing to them if further developments and constructive work were as carefully pursued as the preparation and execution of the revolution had been in the past.

"Being now in a position of power which nobody can take from us," Herr Hitler said, "we are in a position to supervise and determine along planned lines the entire development of the country. We have conquered the country in battle and now we must put it in order again by peace."

Political power, he continued, the Nazis had conquered quickly at one swoop, but, in a few industries, there were still other questions which must be solved.

"We must now go forward step by step without radically destroying existing things or endangering our own foundations and lives. We have made ourselves greater by availing ourselves of individual capability and only in this way can our great reconstructive work be crowned with success."

"Just as in the political and economic world, we can only obtain our privileges and rights by our achievements. We can acquire influence in business and in other positions of industry, and we must train the younger generation to economic leadership."—Reuter.

LEADERS' SUPPORT WANTED.

Berlin, July 13. Professing himself opposed to any experiment in socialisation, Dr. Schmitt, the new Minister of Economy, in a speech before the leading personalities of German industry and trade, said that it was not the task of the state to assume the sole responsibility for regulating economic life. Economic problems could only be solved by the responsible leaders of Germany's economy who had risen to their present positions by their own merits. These leaders should, however, give their unrestricted support to the Government in accomplishing the great and difficult task confronting it. Chancellor Hitler, the Minister continued, had repeatedly stated that the co-operation of the economic leaders was indispensable for the success of his programme and that every attempt at socialisation was bound to fail because it was contrary to human nature that anyone should devote himself to business activities without any prospects for personal benefit.

Turning to the London Conference, the Minister said that many methods of economic reconstruction had been proposed but it behoved Germans to act as sober business men, it being evident that, for the time being, every nation must rely on self-help and, for that reason, Germany must first of all put her own house in order and to provide work for her people. That did not mean that Germany would refuse any chance of improving her trade relations with other countries. She would do everything in her power to promote commercial relations with the outside world in her own interest. Taking it from a practical point of view, Germany must first seek to stimulate her foreign trade by coming to an understanding with individual states.—Trans-Ocean Kuo Min.

PUBLIC MISCHIEF CASE

POLICE ACTION QUASHED

MAGISTRATE ON HIS DECISION

"I have considered it very carefully," said Mr. Wynne-Jones in giving his decision, "and, in spite of your suggestion that I can deduce from the facts guilty knowledge by the defendant, I find that, with the actual facts proved, there are explanations in another way. The fact that he did not demand a deposit on the reward went to show he did not have the intention to arrest him as a bandit but to have him locked up. As a Police constable, defendant would know the routine."

In the second place, continued the magistrate they had asked him to deduce from the fact that there was an interval of two days between the time of giving the information and the arrest, that he wanted the complainant to be arrested on Sunday. Defendant would know there would be inspectors on duty even on Sundays. And if complainant made his claim, the inspector would not wait until Monday. That, anyway, was the day, inspector at the station would carry out the duty. And defendant being an ex-policeman would know that.

DIFFERENT CASE.

"There are possible alternative explanations to this case which you ask me to regard as evidence of guilty mind. As I pointed out yesterday, this case differs in one very important respect from Rex v. Manley. In Rex v. Manley, the information given to the Police was by a person who claimed to know the facts, of her own knowledge.

She stated in fact she had been assaulted and robbed; and gave the Police a description of the man who she alleged had assaulted her. In this case the informer is the prisoner who goes to the D. W. and says that a man named Lo Kwong told him. It is obvious from that, that he himself is not claiming to be an authority for that information. The D. W. in this case has been in the Force for eight months, and from the evidence I find no evidence that he did anything at all to check up on the information."

It is a fact and an undoubted duty on the Police to make all enquiries they could before proceeding to arrest on information. Inspector Elston—Except that the Police never received the information.

SAME RESPONSIBILITIES.

Magistrate—The district watchman is by the Ordinances given the powers and duty of the constable. It would be a terrible thing if I stated that the D. W. Force were allowed to arrest at large and free of all the responsibility that is on the Police. I think the responsibility still remains that where it is still possible to check your information, the Police must check before the arrest. If it had been done, it is possible that the original informant, Lo Kwong, would have been caught and the matter then would have been very different. I think, therefore, on these grounds, (and you have not produced evidence before me on which I can reasonably deduce the real guilt of the defendant's mind), I must discharge him."

READY TO STATE CASE.

"Unfortunately, in this Colony, a magistrate cannot state a case as he can at Home, and therefore I have to accept the responsibility myself, and I must be very careful not to allow any new principle to

INEXPLICABLE LAPSE

Commended Constable in Trouble

ROBS PRISONERS

Chief Detective Inspector Shannon, before Mr. Wynne-Jones in the Central Police Court this morning prosecuted Wong Shing, 42, an ex-constable in the Hongkong Police Force, with larceny of $920.75, the property of prisoners between September 23 and December 16 last year, and further with desertion from the Force.

Defendant, who pleaded guilty to both charges, was stated to have been twice commended by H. E. the Governor, and bore a comparatively good record.

C. D. I. Shannon said defendant joined the Force in December 1914, and in 1923 was appointed searcher in Central charge room and also acted as Hokio interpreter. In December last he was reported missing. He had obtained leave on December 17 and failed to report. Enquiries showed he returned to his native place at San Mei.

DEPORTEES ROBBED.

On December 22, a batch of deportees were assembled to be sent away from the Colony and on opening up their boxes found a considerable amount of valuables and money missing. Enquiries went to show that these persons were searched by the defendant, and the property was extracted before the boxes finally reached the inspector. On this being discovered compensation was made to the prisoners concerned by the Government and a warrant was then taken out for the defendant's arrest. He was arrested by Canton Police at San Mei on July 15 and brought to Hongkong on the 17th.

The C.D.I. added—"Defendant's record of service is good. He was twice commended by His Excellency the Governor. Why he should succumb to this temptation I don't know and defendant has not seen fit to tell me why. The reports against him have been minor ones. He was a very satisfactory worker in the charge room and was regarded as a reliable man. The very serious point of view is that there was a certain amount of trust placed on the defendant and he abused that trust."

Asked if he had anything to say, defendant said he felt rather deaf, and his eyes were sore.

BREACH OF TRUST.

C. D. I. Shannon—it is true that defendant's sight is failing. That may have and some effect on his deciding that he probably could not stay, and he got something and cleared out. In a couple of years he would have been pensioned."

Magistrate (to accused)—You have committed a very grave breach of trust. Not only have you abused your personal trust, but you have loved the prestige of the Police Force in whom the public is entitled to put their trust. On the first charge you are sentenced to six months' imprisonment. Taking in view your comparatively good record, I will fine you $250 or three months' on the second charge, the sentences to be concurrent.

CAPTIVES' ROUGH TIME

BOUND DURING ENCOUNTER

Newchwang, July 15. A messenger sent out on July 11 brought in three letters on Thursday night from the bandits who are holding the three British officers from the s.s. Nanchwang, Messrs. A. D. Blue, C. Johnson and W. E. Hargrave.

These were addressed to the Consul and to the gendarmes and suggested that a reliable intermediary should be sent out to negotiate.

The captives indicate that they have had a rough time following an encounter between bandits and troops on July 5. They were taken ashore with a pair of guards looking after each one of them and, for the first time each of them, was bound.

A messenger took back the Japanese reply at seven o'clock this morning, which is the 107th day of their captivity.

Prospects for the release of the prisoners are considered brighter than they have been at any time up to now.—Reuter.

INGENIOUS METHOD OF SMUGGLING

An elderly Chinese who secreted a quantity of tobacco in a bouquet of paper flowers, was fined $5 or seven days by Mr. Wynne-Jones this morning for evading duty.

While on patrol in the vicinity of Green Island last night, Revenue Officer Ward's attention was drawn to a small boat which had no lights. On his approach he saw packets being dumped into the water. Two boat folk were arrested, and 25 lbs. of tobacco was recovered.

They appeared before Mr. Wynne-Jones this morning and were fined $15 or six weeks each. R. O. Ward said the boat was used solely for smuggling purposes, and he asked for confiscation. The order was granted.

KENT AND SURREY IN THRILLING MATCH

RECTORY FIELD INCIDENTS FREEMAN'S BIG EFFORT

KENT WIN ON TIME

OTHER CRICKET WASHED OUT

London, July 18. The Rectory Field at Blackheath, whose cricket history records the doctory deeds of Kent and Surrey in days gone by, was the scene of another thrilling match between these two counties during the last three days, culminating in a Kent victory by 215 runs only a few minutes before close of play.

Cricket in some of its best aspects was seen in the course of the match, Kent, ten runs in arrears on the first innings, set about the Surrey bowling until it had been reduced to impotence and the Hop county had at least made themselves safe from defeat.

After that came Freeman. Bowling with marked skill, he tied the Surrey batsmen up in knots and made possible a dramatic Kent victory, the last Surrey batsman being sent back with only a few minutes to spare.

Apart from the fitting climax, there were several distinctive performances. Cover opened up big possibilities for Surrey when he dismissed Kent in their first visit to the ground for 251. His share was to capture 6 wickets for 82 runs.

HOBBS TO THE RESCUE

Surrey, however, did not make the most of their opportunity, and but for Hobbs would have made a pretty sorry reply. As it was, thanks to the former England batsman, who hit up 101, the visitors scored 201, leading by ten on the first innings.

Kent batting was of a vastly different calibre in the return visit. Leslie Ames and Leslie Todd, two of the youngsters of the team, set about their task of scoring plenty of runs with refreshing abandon and vigour. Both topped the century mark before dismissal. Ames scoring 127 and Todd 121. It enabled Kent to apply the closure at 377 for 6, leaving Surrey to score 368 to win.

In view of the time at their disposal it was an impossible task.

As it was the visitors collapsed before the wiles of Freeman and in a great race against the clock, just lost.

Rain ruined W. Walker's benefit match in which Notts met Lancashire, and so restricted were the hours of play that it was impossible to complete two innings. Walker enjoyed the distinction of scoring a three figure innings, made out of 276.

Lancashire in reply scored freely, and when rain put an end to the game were only 71 runs behind, with six wickets in hand.

LEAGUE TENNIS.

CLOSE CALL FOR K.C.C.

RECREIO JUST BEATEN

DECISION ON THE LAST SET

"B" DIVISION MATCH

(By "Veritas")

After leading by two and a half sets to a half on the first round, the Kowloon Cricket Club had to fight hard to beat the Recreio in a "B" Division tennis league match yesterday, and finally scrapped home by the odd set in nine.

The visitors made a smart recovery, and eventually the result depended on the last two sets. Recreio obtained one, but Jack Rodger and Hambly managed to clinch the issue for the Cricket Club.

The courts were in a difficult condition, overnight rain leaving them soft and a sharp shower before start rendering the surface slippery and a little dangerous. The Recreio took some time to settle down, and this enabled the K.C.C. to assume a valuable lead. Rodger and Hambly made the utmost of the position by winning quickly against L. Silva and J. Remedios. This Recreio pair, as soon as they had settled down, proved distinctly superior to either of the other K.C.C. combinations and won their remaining two sets with little difficulty.

SMART RECOVERY.

The best achievement of Rodger and Hambly, who won two and a half sets, was to share the points with A. E. Xavier and J. B. Gonsales after being 5-1 in arrears. By retrieving everything possible, the K.C.C. pair took a sequence of games and halved the set.

Burnett and Gray should have won their first set instead of leaving it halved. They jumped into a three-love lead, and then lost it. They caught up after being 5-4 in arrears to lead again at 6-5, but Gonsales service saved the Recreio couple.

The Recreio were a little unlucky to find the verdict against them, and under different conditions there is little doubt that the result would have been reversed.

LEAGUE RECORDS.

The respective league records of the two teams read:
K.C.C. 4 2 0 2 18½ 17½ 4
Recreio 3 2 0 1 17½ 9½ 4

SENATORS AGAIN SHOCKED

NOSED OUT BY ST. LOUIS

YANKEES STILL WINNING

New York, July 18.

At their present rate of going the Washington Senators will very soon be off the map so far as the American League leadership is concerned.

To-day they suffered another reverse when St. Louis nosed them out, whereas the New York Yankees, leading candidates for the World Series, scored another comfortable victory, overcoming Chicago.

The Giants helped themselves to another useful win, and St. Louis, their closest rivals followed suit, being too good for Philadelphia.

FINE SPORTING RECORD

Mexico Astonished By English Man

London. For 28 years an English sportsman, Mr. Claude Butlin, has astonished Mexico with his athletic feats. He is known to Mexican sport fans by the affectionate name of "Claude," and he probably has a larger record of sporting conquests than any other Englishman living abroad.

He was born in Ceylon and educated at St. George's College, Surrey.

These are some of "Claude's" triumphs:

For 20 years he was singles tennis champion of Mexico.
For ten years open champion at golf.

For nine years he topped bowling and batting average in Mexico. (He has broken 50 stumps in the course of his bowling career).

For five years he has been Mexican champion at the open hurdles as well as for the 70, 100, and 220 yards.

He once won 20 prizes in bicycle races on the old "Pennyfarthing."

Now, with five hundred odd prizes and cups to his credit, Mr. Claude Butlin has settled down as Mexico's champion at bowls. (Continued on Page 6.)

INTERPORT SWIMMING

JAPANESE INVITATION ACCEPTED

PREPARATIONS IN HAND

At a special meeting of the committee of the Shanghai Amateur Swimming Association held at the Foreign Y.M.C.A., last Wednesday, an invitation from the Kobe Swimming Association invited Shanghai to send a team for an interport gala in that city to be held sometime during the second week of September, was put before the members and accepted.

The local Association decided to accept this invitation from Kobe and preparations are now being made for the selection of the team and meeting the expenses of the trip. A committee of three has been chosen to take care of the arrangements for local gala to help raise funds for the trip. This committee will also have major responsibility for the selection of the team that will represent Shanghai. Mr. J. Huxley, of the Cercle Sportif Francais, is chairman of this committee and G. A. Johnston, former Hon. Secretary and Treasurer of the Shanghai Amateur Swimming Association, and Chas. Brown, one of the most experienced swimmers in Shanghai, will serve on this committee. It is probable that the team will leave for Kobe September 10 or 12 and that the gala will take place about the middle of the month.

LOCAL CHAMPIONSHIPS.

An announcement is also made in connexion with the meeting of the dates and places for holding the Shanghai Championships for 1933.

LEAGUE TENNIS

RE-ARRANGED "A" DIV. MATCH.

A re-arranged "A" Division league tennis match will be played this afternoon, when the Indian Recreation Club entertain the South China "B" team at Sookunpoo.

This match was originally scheduled for Monday, July 10, but rain prevented it from being played.

ENGLISH GIRL BEATEN

Loses French Golf Title

Boulogne, July 10. At Wimereux, near Boulogne, the final of the French Women's Open Golf Championship was played off to-day.

Miss Kathleen Garnham won the championship, beating Miss Pauline Doran, an English girl who had been champion for the last three years by four and three. The match was over 36 holes and the winner was three strokes ahead of the runner-up.

INTERPORT POLO

HONGKONG GOING TO SHANGHAI

TOURNEY MIDDLE OF AUGUST

Shanghai, July 16.

The triangular interport polo tournament for the Keswick Cup between Shanghai, Tientsin and Hongkong, will be played here during August, according to information from local polo circles.

The visiting teams, it is understood, will arrive here about August 12, and it is expected that the first match of the tournament will be played on August 17 or 18.

Tientsin, according to word received here, will be making a determined effort to walk off with the Keswick Trophy, which is now in possession of the local players, while Hongkong will also be sending up a strong team. Practically the whole of the Tientsin U.S. Infantry, while it is also understood that young Keswick and three British army players will represent Hongkong this year.

THREE MATCHES.

Nothing definite regarding the matches to be played, has been arranged, but tentatively, three tilts will be staged, Shanghai playing Hongkong and Tientsin, and the visiting teams clashing in the third match.

In last year's competition for the trophy, Shanghai travelled to Hongkong and defeated the home side. Tientsin, however, was unable to send a team to the colony. The last time they met Hongkong and Tientsin played here was in 1931 when local polo enthusiasts were treated to some hotly contested fixtures.

The locals are confident that they will retain the trophy, due to the wealth of excellent playing material on hand. Just who will play for Shanghai, will be decided in the near future.

1934 Elimination Contest

Vienna, July 18.
In the second preliminary round of the 1934 Davis Cup competition, Austria defeated Spain today, taking all five matches of the series.
The Austria-Spain match is one made necessary by the new rules governing Davis Cup competition, which provides for matches throughout the summer months, and for the entry of semi-finalists only into the actual Davis Cup tournament. Only from those teams which compete in the eliminations will the challengers come. No others will be allowed to compete.

On July 22, however, a meeting will be held in Paris, at which international representatives will attend, which will discuss cancellation of this system.

The scores of the Austria-Spain round are as follows: Artens beat Maler, 7-5, 6-3, 2-6, 6-2; Matejka beat Suque, 6-0, 6-3, 6-7; Artens and Matejka beat Maler and Durall, 6-8, 6-4, 2-6, 6-3; Matejka beat Durall, 6-3, 6-1, 8-10, 6-3; Artens beat Suque, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3.

their latest victims. Herbert Sutcliffe and Macaulay played leading parts in the success, the former compiling 177 in an innings which totalled 367, and Macaulay sent back Middlesex in their second innings for 114 after they had made 305 in their initial occupation of the crease.

But one of the finest achievements of the match was that of Sims, the Middlesex Yorkshire score, captured 5 wickets for 69 runs.

Derbyshire's batting broke down against Sussex and mainly contributed to their defeat by six wickets.

James Langridge bowled them out in their second knock for 195, after they had hit up 163 in the first innings.

Sussex replied with 284 and then lost four wickets obtaining 72 runs to win the match.

Northants completely outplayed Worcester to record victory by an innings and 53 runs. Liddell's century was followed by Jupp's accurate bowling which earned for him an analysis of 5 for 51.

WATER POLO GAMES.

Y.M.C.A. Beats Chinese Team Handily.

In the water polo league matches played at the Chinese Civil Servants Bathing Club in North Point yesterday afternoon, the European Y.M.C.A. beat the Chung Sing, the score being 4-0. The score in half time was 4-0.

In the second match, between the South China Athletic Association "B" and the Hongkong University, the score was a draw, 2-2.

KOWLOON CABARET SUMMONS.

ACTION FAILS BECAUSE OF TECHNICAL POINT

The case against the Cathay Dancing Institute by residents of Katherine Building yesterday, when D. Powell, the proprietor of the Institute, was summoned before Mr. Butters at the Kowloon Magistracy for committing a nuisance between sunset and sunrise on July 8 was eventually dismissed on a technical point.

Defendant was in Court when the case was called in the afternoon, and stated that there was a mistake regarding the summons as he had ceased to be the owner of the Institute since May, when he sold it to Mr. Burgess. "I have nothing to do with it now," he added.

"When the sergeant served the summons, I was actually present, and I told him that it was a mistake. I then went to see Mr. Booker at the Yau Ma Tei Police Station and explained matters to him.

Inspector Booker interposed here, saying that he wished to contest defendant's statement. As far as the Police were aware, Powell had been the proprietor since last December. He pointed out that when the Cathay Dancing Institute was summoned for selling intoxicating liquor, Powell was named, together with a man Shepherd, as co-partner. Later on, a man named Burgess was summoned for causing a nuisance by residents of Katherine Building, but that was when Powell was confined to his ship as a result of the Police action regarding liquor on the premises. Defendant resumed charge when he came out.

Continuing, Inspector Booker said he spoke to the defendant last month and the latter told him, "We are closing down at the end of this month (June)." Now the Police officer understood that the Institute would be closed at the end of July.

Mr. P. A. Dixon, residing at Katherine Buildings, who took out the summons, stated that after the summons had been served, defendant went up to his house last Tuesday, but he was not in. Defendant spoke to his father, and asked that the summons be withdrawn, giving an assurance that the nuisance would abate. Defendant signed this assurance, as proprietor and manager of the Cathay Dancing Institute.

His Worship remarked that defendant could not deny responsibility and at the same time give a written assurance. In the circumstances, he would take defendant's statement as a plea of not guilty.

Complainant's Evidence. Giving evidence, Mr. Dixon stated that July 8 was a Saturday. At 8 p.m. he heard the orchestra at the Cathay Dancing Academy striking up in the usual way, and was strongly contested, the K.C.C. just scraping home by the odd point, with five matches to four. S. A. Gray and G. C. Burnoth (K.C.C.) beat D. Gutierrez and I. A. Noronha, 6-3; lost to L. Silva and J. J. Remedios, 3-6; drew with A. B. Xavier and J. B. Goncalves, 6-6. R. B. Hamby and J. J. Rodgers (K.C.C.) beat Gutierrez and Noronha, 6-4; beat Silva and Remedios, 6-1; drew with Xavier and Goncalves, 6-6. E. Green and D. S. Green (K.C.C.) beat Gutierrez and Noronha, 6-2; lost to Silva and Remedios, 3-6; lost to Xavier and Goncalves, 3-6. The match between U.S.S. and C.R.C. was postponed owing to the unit condition of the courts.

at 8.45 p.m. witness left his house to attend the night fete at the V.R.C.

Answering the Magistrate, witness said he had never been inside the Cathay and he did not know what instruments the orchestra used. He could make out a piano and several string instruments.

Magistrate.—What happened afterwards?—I had already gone to the V.R.C., but I have other witnesses here.

But you took out the summons. What happened between 8 and 8.45 p.m. when you were home?—The band played in the usual way.

You were not home after 8.45 p.m.—No.

And they did not disturb you?—No, not on that particular night.

But when you took out the summons, you were asked to give a date?—Yes, I was asked to give a date.

You chose that date yourself?—Yes.

That was a very foolish thing to do. Magistrate (to Inspector Booker).—I don't see any evidence of disturbance on the night in question. I discharge the defendant. It's the residents' own fault.

Defendant.—Thank you, your Worship.

few weeks ago, on my way back from the Far East, I began to wonder if another of these great manifestations of popular faith may not be on the way. I found the whole Dominion, from Vancouver to Quebec, discussing the success of the mission which the Oxford Group Movement, headed by Dr. Frank Buchman, has been conducting there for the past six months.

The Canadian newspapers were publishing reports of their meetings several columns long. A book on the aims and methods of the movement that I bought was marked as being in the 112th thousand of its sales.

A large number of the Protestant clergy of the Dominion have given this mission their support.
Its methods of operation are very like those of the religious organizations that exist among undergraduates at English Universities.
They are informal, social and easy-going. Most of the missionaries, indeed, are men and women from Oxford and Cambridge, though joined with them are a British Vice-Admiral, a missionary Bishop and a number of people from other parts of the Empire.

The Movement holds conventions which it calls "house-parties."
These last two or three days, and have been held at well-known Canadian country-clubs and some of the largest hotels in the Dominion.
On these occasions public meetings for prayer, addresses and hymn-singing alternate with entertainments and tea-parties. At Calgary 1,000 people attended a "houseparty," and another of the same size was to be held at the Chateau Frontenac Hotel in Quebec the week after I passed through, for which special trains were being run from the other side of Canada, four days' travelling away.

"The mutual discussion of spiritual experiences," I was told, is the object of these gatherings.
The basis of the Movement's creed is that peace in the world can spring only from peace in men's hearts; that the solution of the international problems of to-day depends upon a change in the spiritual set-up of mankind.
Honesty and frankness are the forces on which it relies to work this change.

It would be easy to smile at the idea of gatherings where men and women are invited to "share" their religious difficulties and to make mutual confession of their faults—but I must admit that I was impressed by the hold which the Oxford Group Movement has evidently taken on the minds of many Canadians whose education and knowledge of the world would safeguard them against merely emotional methods of appeal. I heard from a thoroughly reliable source of the case of a rich Montrealer who, as a result of the mission's work, had handed over to the Treasury $12-000, out of which his wife, with his approval, had defrauded the Custom at various times by smuggling in goods from Europe.

"The Movement is still gaining ground," writes a Canadian friend of mine, who stands quite outside it, in a letter I received the other day. "It is enlisting a great many well-to-do and some really wealthy people. It would not surprise me at all if in a reasonably brief time the Oxford Movement attains considerable importance in Canada. Its appeal lies in the fact that it is inter-denominational and that its organization is not too closely knit. Either their propaganda is put out by first-class publicity people or their converts are extremely active talkers. I do not know which is correct. I do know that our homes here are full of quite impressive gossip covering everything from the restoration of wasters to usefulness in society, to the payment of huge sums of conscience money to the treasuries of the Federal and Provincial Governments and to private concerns. In fact, it has about reached the point where ordinary folks are beginning to shake their heads and say that there must be something to it."
The cheerful optimism of this new religious efforts is bound to have its appeal for a discouraged and impoverished world. Wycliffe's work developed against the grim background of the Black Death.
It was, in the "hungry forties" that the last Oxford Movement reached its full magnitude. Is it possible that the harassed nerves of our own generation will find relief in another religious revival?

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

YESTERDAY'S MARKET STEADY

According to Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz, the New York market was steady yesterday. Business done 6,500,000 shares. The Wall Street Journal reports:—Mining shares soared near the close of the market advancing entire list and was most active due to a decline in the U.S. Dollar and reports that the United States will soon lift gold ban making it possible for a free gold market. The list was irregular earlier in the day due to heavy profit-taking. U.S. Steel, however, touched 67 for the first time since 1931 due to bullish industry news. Grain prices were unsettled by heavy profit-taking. Cable received at 10.68 during our Night Service from Swan, Culbertson and Fritz, New York.
The market may be approaching climate bulge and cautionness seems advisable, although higher prices should follow any temporary reaction.
Wheat: Liverpool strong. Reckless public buying is a feature here for cash. Cotton: Opened higher in Liverpool and on exchange. There is more selling on advances. Average brokerage opinion is to be more cautious and still feels that moderation at present levels advisable.

GOVERNMENT AND CHINESE BATHING FACILITIES

ALTERNATIVE SITES

GOVERNMENT MAKING ARRANGEMENTS

ON ISLAND AND IN KOWLOON

The Chinese community need have no fear that they are to be deprived of their bathing facilities if and when the Government decline to renew the tenancy of their bathing pavilion sites at North Point.

The Government is giving careful consideration to a number of alternative sites both on the island and on the mainland.

A Government official informed us this afternoon that the matter has been under consideration by the P.W.D. in particular and the Government in general for some weeks and every possible step is being taken to ensure that the alternative accommodation is suitable.

It could not be said when the Clubs would be required to move but they would have to move sometime.

It was pointed out that the agreement between the seven Chinese Bathing Clubs and the Government was on a yearly basis and in view of the enormous progress being made in general development in the North Point district it would not be advisable for the Clubs to resume occupation of their present sites.

GOVERNMENT PLANS.

It was intended by the Government to make that district an outlet for a number of sewers and the proximity of bathing beaches was certainly undesirable in the interests of the health of the community.

Asked if it was the intention of the Government to sell the land along the beach for building works, shops and warehouses, the official replied that the land was needed for general development.

A petition has been received by the Government signed by members of the South China Athletic Association, Chinese Bathing Club, Chinese Bankers' Association, Chinese Athletic Association, Young Men's Christian Association, the Sun Co., and Wing On Co., and we are informed that it will receive due and careful consideration.

UNPAID MUI TSAI

MISTRESS FINED AND TOLD TO PAY

Sub-Inspector H. W. Fraser, of the S.C.A., prosecuted a woman, Ho Yeung-shi, before Mr. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning, for having failed to pay wages to a registered mui tsai, Yu San-mui.

It was stated that the girl complained to the S.C.A. that she had been beaten by defendant's young son, who was fourteen years of age. It was subsequently discovered that she had not been paid her wages since the day of registration. This now amounted to $48.55. There were no marks of violence on the girl, and she appeared to have been well-treated.

Defendant stated that the girl was constantly ill, and that was why she did not pay her wages.

Mr. Schofield imposed a fine of $20 and ordered that she pay $48.55 on behalf of the girl to the S.C.A.

PORTUGUESE CHARGED WITH ASSAULT

GIRL HAIRDRESSER'S ALLEGATION

Hit Whilst in Rickshaw

Augusto Frederico Rosario, living at No. 8 Parkos Street, appeared before Mr. Butters at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning charged with assaulting Li Cho, a hairdresser employed at the Peninsula Hotel, yesterday morning.

Detective Sergeant Points said it was alleged by the complainant that while she was riding in a rickshaw in Canton Road on her way back to work yesterday morning, defendant came up on her right and slapped her across the face. She stopped the rickshaw, seized hold of the defendant and handed him over to the Police.

After describing the alleged assault which took place in Canton Road near Jordan Road, complainant said she had never seen defendant before except on some occasions three months ago when he came to her door to beg for money.

She had no money to give him but gave him food. He came to her house after that for three days running, and she gave him food every time. At the end of the third day, she alleged, he asked her for a loan of $100, which she refused. Then one evening when she was returning home after work, she met defendant near her house, and he seized her, pushed her into a door and threw something into her face. Later she found that her face had been burnt.

DOCUMENTS PRODUCED.

She reported the matter to the Police then, but she did not see defendant for about two months until yesterday when the alleged assault took place.

Complainant stated that when she was holding him pending the arrival of the Police after the alleged incident, defendant threw something over a wall, but this was recovered by the Police.

Sergeant Points stated that the packet referred to contained what he believed to be some Chinese medicine.

Asked if he had questions to ask the witness, defendant produced some documents which he alleged had been written by the complainant to him. He claimed that he had known the complainant for the last ten years and had lived with her for about two months this year.

Complainant denied all these allegations.

Defendant also stated that it was raining at the time of the alleged assault, and the hood of the rickshaw was down. The cover in front was also on and he could not therefore have assaulted complainant in the manner described.

Complainant admitted that the hood was on but not the cover.

"A PIMP"

A rickshaw coolie gave corroborative evidence of the assault, but defendant stated that this witness was a pimp. Witness denied the allegation.

A sister of the complainant who was in another rickshaw just in front at the time of the incident gave evidence of having heard a shout of "Why do you hit me?" from her sister. She turned round and found her sister holding defendant.

Describing himself as a dancing teacher, defendant stated that the charge against him was trumped-up. He was standing in Canton Road waiting for a bus when complainant seized him and accused him of having assaulted her.

He alleged that he had known complainant and her sister for a number of years, and had on some occasions lived with them.

After hearing the evidence, his Worship commented that there was a great deal of allegations on both sides, and he thought his wisest course would be to bind defendant over for a period of a year.

China's New Mentor

APPOINTMENT OF DR. RAJCHMANN

NANKING PLAN OF DEVELOPMENT

Paris, July 18. Dr. L. L. Rajchmann, the Director of the League of Nations Health Department expects to leave Paris for China within a week or so, possibly accompanied by Mr. T. V. Soong.

His task is to coordinate the technical and advisory work being carried out in China under the League of Nations' auspices, the appointment having been made at today's meeting of the League Sub-Committee.

The Committee decided that Dr. Rajchmann's functions would be (1) to supply information both ways, from Nanking to Geneva and vice versa, to send frequent interim reports and detailed quarterly reports to the Secretary-General of the League;

(2) to assist the Chinese Government and the National Economic Council to coordinate the activities of League of Nations advisory experts in China.

APPOINTED FOR YEAR.

Dr. Rajchmann's appointment is for the period of a year. The Chinese Government will pay his salary and expenses.

It is emphasised that his powers are technical and not political and that he will have his headquarters in Nanking.

Dr. Rajchmann is not a stranger to China. He has visited the Far East frequently in the course of work on behalf of the League in the past ten years.

REGULAR MEETINGS.

The League Committee responsible for making the appointment will meet regularly at Geneva, probably on the receipt of each quarterly report from Mr. Rajchmann.

Mr. T. V. Soong, who was present at the meeting with Dr. Wellington Koo, expressed satisfaction at the League's readiness to assist in the reorganisation of China.

Mr. Theodore Mariner, Chancery of the U.S. Embassy was present as an observer, in accordance with the committee's invitation to America to co-operate in the work.

KOO LUNCHEON.

Mr. Soong was subsequently the guest of honour at a luncheon given by Dr. Wellington Koo, at which all the members of the committee, M. Avenol, the League Secretary-General, and the Chinese Ministers to Holland, Spain and Switzerland were present.—Reuter.

Mr. Schofield imposed a fine of $100.

BRITISH COAL PETROL

STATEMENT BY COMPANY

CREATING NEW EMPLOYMENT

London, July 18. The plant for the production of oil from coal will give direct employment to over 2,500 miners and other workers, as well as much indirect employment.

It will be operated by the Imperial Chemical Industries Ltd., at Billingham on Tees in Durham. Sir Harry McGowan, Chairman of the Company, states that new capital of about £2,500,000 would be furnished from the company's own resources.

The Company have conducted research on the hydrogenation of coal tar and other material for six years and in view of the undertaking given in the House of Commons, the directors have authorised the erection of a large commercial plant.

An initial output of 100,000 tons annually of first-grade petrol is aimed at by a process using 400 tons of coal daily and using altogether about 1,000 tons daily. The construction of the plant is estimated to take about one and a half years and will call for much activity in the iron and steel and heavy industries.

Seven thousand men will find direct employment during this period and it is expected that there will be indirect employment for a further 5,000 men.—British Wireless.

CONSTABLE FACES SERIOUS CHARGE

ALLEGED CASE OF MISCONDUCT

Police Constable Au Cheong-kat, attached to the No. 2, Police Station, was arraigned before Mr. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning, on a serious charge of misconduct.

Mr. T. P. K. Kemble, of Messrs. Wilkinson and Grist, appeared for defendant, and tendered a plea of not guilty, while Mr. Calthrop, A.S.P., prosecuted.

Outlining the case, Mr. Calthrop said that about 10 a.m. on June 13 a woman named Yeung Ho was walking in Queen's Road West. Defendant accosted her and asked her whether she had anything with her. She replied in the negative. The defendant then asked her to go with him to the No. 7, Police Station. She accompanied him, and outside the Ko Shing Theatre defendant produced a parcel, which he said contained opium, and accused her of having dropped it.

RELEASED FOR $15

The woman denied the allegation, and was taken to No. 7 Station. There Sergeant Whitcroft realised that it was a Central case, and asked the defendant to take the woman to the Central Police Station. They left, and in Kwai Heung Street, the woman sent a small girl to fetch a relative of hers. When this relative arrived the defendant demanded $30 to release the woman, and after much bargaining the price was reduced to $15. The relative borrowed the money from a stall holder, and handed it to the defendant, who disappeared.

Defendant was bound over for a year.

MAN FACES CAPITAL CHARGE

MURDER TRIAL OPENS

ELDERLY WOMAN STRANGLED

The Shaukiwan murder trial arising from the discovery at 57, Kam Wah Street on June 2 of an elderly Chinese woman who had been strangled was commenced before the Chief Justice, (Mr. J. R. Wood), at the Criminal Sessions this morning.

Fan Hing, 20, the accused, pleaded not guilty to the indictment.

He and his wife, Heung Shui-kui, 20, were committed for trial from the Central Court but the Crown filed a multi prosequi in respect of the female defendant and the husband now stands alone in the dock.

A statement in which prisoner attributes the planning and part of the execution of the murder to his wife was read to the court.

The dead woman is Po Mui, aged 60, and it is alleged that she was lured to a vacant basement five doors away from her own address, 47, Kam Wah Street, and there strangled with a portion of a cotton singlet.

Mr. J. A. Fraser, Assistant Attorney General, prosecuted for the Crown, and Mr. H. C. Macnamara, instructed by Messrs. Lo and Lo, represented the prisoner.

The jury was composed of Messrs. F. F. Mow (Foreman), H. A. Castro, J. A. S. Alves, O. B. Raven, D. Ellis, A. D. S. Gomes, and H. D. Brown.

CROWN CASE.

Opening the case for the Crown, Mr. Fraser said a post mortem examination of the body was conducted and its condition indicated that death was due to strangulation. Round the neck was a tightly tied ligature which was produced in court.

Deceased went to live at 47, Kam Wah Street, on April 30 and with her were her three granddaughters, the eldest of whom conducted the household. Prisoner and his wife rented a cubicle in the house at $3.80 per month and after they had been living there five days he obtained work at the docks. He remained at this job until May 28 and during that time received $6 wages.

A further $1.30 which was due to him had not been drawn.

Meanwhile the wife remained at home and in order to keep the house going she borrowed small sums from deceased amounting to 60 cents.

A significant fact inasmuch as it showed that the old lady had money and that the prisoner and his wife were aware of that fact, was the loss of $100 from a belt worn by deceased. This sum was found by the wife in the presence of her husband and the deceased and was returned to the last-named.

The rent became due on May 27 but it was not paid.

On the last day of the month a matched theatre attracted a large section of the community including tenants of 47, Kam Wah Street, and at about 7 p.m. there were on the floor only deceased and her eight-year-old granddaughter, and an old lady and child besides Fan Hing and his wife. The granddaughter asked for some peanuts and the old lady left the house presumably to buy them. That was all that was known of events in the house at that time as the other elderly woman had gone to sleep.

DISCOVERY OF CRIME.

Kwok, the granddaughter, was at the theatre which continued its performance until dawn, and at about 3 a.m., prisoner came up to her and paid her the rent and other money that was owing. He added that he was also removing to Fourth Street. When she returned to the house Kwok did in fact, and prisoner and his wife packing and they left soon afterwards. Meanwhile Po Mui had not returned and Kwok went out to look for her.

She had met with no success at 4.30 p.m. that day so she informed the police. They too were unable to find the woman at first, but when they ordered a search of the empty houses in the vicinity, the discovery of the crime was made.

The Princess Royal, who is reported to be suffering from acute fatigue.

Investigations were then pursued to trace prisoner and his wife but enquiries at Fourth Street were a failure. A few days later, however, a watchman saw them at Aberdeen and on the pretext that they were wanted in connexion with a debt, he induced them to enter a public service vehicle with him and handed them over to the Shaukiwan police.

Prisoner was in possession of $3.49 and his wife carried a wallet containing $135 in notes. She was also wearing jewellery which had been exchanged for a rattan bracelet mounted in gold and exactly similar to one missing from deceased's body. Over $200 had been taken from deceased's belt and a few articles of jewellery were also absent.

HUSBAND'S ALLEGATION.

When cautioned and charged prisoner said: "It was my wife who asked me to murder the woman Po Mui. My wife is to blame for this. She got ready all the things for strangling the woman, put them all in her bag and kept them with her. She then offered me a key and told me to go into the house, open the back door and lock the main door. I said: 'Such a thing is impossible.' She said: 'You earn 40 cents a day at Taikoo. How can that be sufficient for my food?' I said: 'If the money is not sufficient you can get a bed space to live in.' She said—she must—live in a cubicle. She also said: 'If you don't agree to what I say I will have nothing further to do with you and will steal away to-night.' I said, 'I will not use my hands if you must do it, you must do it yourself.' She pretended to the old woman that I owed her money and induced her to go into the house. I pushed open the door and stepped to one side. My wife followed the old woman who came into the house. My wife then got out the things and tied them round the old woman's neck. She told me to help in pulling the old woman down. The old woman called out 'Save Life!' three times, then I became afraid and wanted to go away. My wife gagged the old woman with some cloth and then told me to get the old woman's money. After I had got the money I handed it to her."

POST MORTEM REVELATIONS.

Dr. Bigby, who is in charge of the Victoria Mortuary, was the first witness called, and gave evidence of examining the body of Po Mui. He stated that twisted round her neck he found a ligature consisting of the arms and upper part of the trunk of a singlet. The skin under the ligature was of a lighter colour than the rest of the skin as decomposition had not set in. That showed that the ligature had been placed round the neck either before or immediately after death. He attributed death to asphyxia by homicidal strangulation; his reasons for this deduction being, firstly, because the head was much more decomposed than any other part of the body, secondly, because the tongue protruded to the full extent, and thirdly, because the internal organs were of a very dark black colour and more decomposed than he had expected to find. When he made his examination, deceased had been dead between 48 and 72 hours.

Evidence in support of the opening statement was given by Inspector E. A. Vincent, Mr. A. Brookbank, of the P.W.D., who prepared the plans, Chan Hing, who depicted the scene, and a constable who took him to the mortuary.

The case is proceeding.

DEATH OF CIRCUS ELEPHANT

A 3,300 POUND CARCASE

DISPOSAL OF THE BODY

Social circles in the animal world were in mourning yesterday, and gloom overshadowing a large section of the entertainment-loving public.

It was in the early hours of Tuesday morning that Fally, the crack elephant of the Great Chinese Circus contingent, breathed her gallant last and laid down in the modest glory of her 3,300 lbs. for a long undisturbed sleep.

Tears were shed by the management too, for Fally had cost a thousand dollars and had departed for the happy hunting grounds of her forefathers at the early age of 3½ years.

Fally hailed from far Rangoon but she never got acclimatised. She just got sicker and sicker until she got to Wanchai and there she packed in her chips in sheer disgust at the futility of life.

DISPOSAL OF THE BODY.

She made a fine corpse as she lay stretched out with her soul already speeding back to the mists of the Rangoon jungles but after a time the beauty of it was rather spoiled by a queerish sort of smell.

They pretended at first that it didn't come from Fally. A fine clean beast if ever there was one. But they had to ring up the Sanitary Department in the end and they came along with a great lorry to take poor Fally away.

CREMATION.

The management were sorry to let her go and they said so. Fally must have heard them for they had to get a bigger lorry before they could accommodate her. Then it took scores of coolies and stocks of bamboo poles, and lots of fine words before she consented to lie down flat and good on the floor.

The disposal of the body created a little problem in itself. Three thousand pounds of elephant is rather awkward on the hands. They couldn't bury Fally. It would hardly have been decent.

Finally they decided to give her a real classy cremation at Kennedy Town and now there's nothing left of her but a cinder or two.

It was a pity they had to burn her a bit at a time. She wouldn't have liked that for she was always one to keep herself to herself.

A SHIP WITHOUT AN OWNER

CAPT. GOING'S AMOY ADVENTURES

Captain Philip Going, master of the s.s. Asia, is in rather an unfortunate plight in Amoy.

The Asia arrived in Amoy from Manila on December 9 last year and since then has never put to sea, the owner having apparently gone bankrupt.

The ship was sold by auction on June 21, but the new owner seems to have got into trouble with the American and Japanese Consulates, and disappeared, although Captain Going is hopeful that this latest difficulty will soon be overcome.

He has now been tied up in Amoy for over seven months without salary and with a crew of 73 to look after.

The crew recently paraded through the streets with banners and flags to draw attention to their position without any tangible result. At the moment, to all appearances, the ship is without an owner.

Shaukiwan, Chan Kwun-shing, the Chinese constable who found the body of deceased, Acting-Inspector Logan, in charge of Shaukiwan Police Station, and the two constables who searched accused and his wife at the Police Station.

Kwok Chin-tai, granddaughter of the deceased woman, gave evidence of accused calling at the theatre and paying her sums of money which were owing on May 21st.

She also identified the articles found on accused and his wife at the Police station as the property of her grandmother.

The case is proceeding.

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY
THE THEATRES

With a cast including Boots Mallory, Wampas, Baby Star, Ralph Morgan, Alexander Kirkland, Irene Ware, Noel Madison, Christian Rub, and Ferike Boros, "Humanity" comes to the King's Theatre on Thursday.

The story embraces the elements of romance and sacrifice as it depicts the adventures of a young doctor who is blind to the ideals of his physician father and who follows the lure of money because of his infatuation of a luxury-loving woman.

Kirkland and Miss Mallory divide the romantic interest and Morgan enacts the role of the father who, with the girl, attempts to guide aright the faltering footsteps of the boy.

Miss Mallory's previous success was "Handle With Care" in which she shared leading honours with James Dunn. Kirkland was widely acclaimed for his recent performance in "Strange Interlude", in which Morgan also played an important role.

Miss Ware who, like Miss Mallory, came from the New York stage, made her picture debut in "Chandu the Magician" and more recently appeared with Warner Baxter in "Six Hours to Live".

"Hell Below"

"Hell Below," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's striking drama of life in the submarine, starring with Robert Montgomery, Walter Houston, Madge Evans, Jimmy Durante, Eugene Pallette and Robert Young, in a great cast, is providing a blend of thriller, romance and comedy at the Queen's Theatre where the finalization of Commander Edward Ellsberg's notable novel, "Pigeons," is now being shown.

The story is a tremendously dramatic one, dealing with the conflict between love and duty faced by a young naval lieutenant in action in the Mediterranean during the World War. Montgomery is serving under the father of the girl he loves, but whose love is forbidden him. How, by disobeying orders, he loses his commission and subsequently redeems himself by a heroic sacrifice is depicted against a thunderous background of naval battles, fights with enemy aircraft and the whole great panorama of war at sea.

"The King's Cup"

"The King's Cup" is having its final run at the Central Theatre to-day. Among the high-lights of this latest British and Dominion film are scenes taken in Cheddar Gorge as a "plane dashes through. This was a dangerous flying feat. A camera was fixed on the front of a plane so that its view-point was approximately that of the pilot—and the plane was then flown down the Gorge. This was a thrilling experience for the pilot and the passenger—Harry Milton and Dorothy Bouchier.

"The Silver Lining"

John Warburton, the screen's latest find, is regarded as the "fastest man" in motion pictures.

He won that title by a dash to Hollywood, an appearance before the camera without a test and the completion of his first picture without a retake.

Warburton, a young Englishman who is said to look like the Prince of Wales and who is appearing now in "The Silver Lining" at the King's, was appearing opposite Alice Brady on the stage in New York City when he received a call to dash to Hollywood. His show closed on a Sunday night, he took a plane on Sunday morning and on Monday thirty hours later he was before the camera.

This for his first motion picture role, a record never before attempted.

No tests were made of Warburton the fact that he for the past six years had been starring in Broadway productions was enough to convince Alan Crosland, director, that Warburton possessed the necessary qualifications desirable in a leading man for film roles.

Tall, good looking, a man's man, Warburton is a new name in motion pictures to conjure with.

"What! No Beer?"

At last the Wots and the Drys can agree on something. Those on either side who go to see the beer problem expounded by Buster Keaton and Jimmy Durante in "What! No Beer?" which opens next Sunday at the Queen's Theatre will agree that as beer makers they are a pair of well comedians. With malice toward none and hearty laughter for all, Buster and the Schnozzle operate a brewery in this hilarious tale. The foamy liquid flows so fast that it all but drowns them in one of the scenes.

It all happens when Buster, who is as dry as Jimmy Durante is wet, and "Schnozzle" leave the polls on election day and, quicker than they know what has happened, find themselves at the helm of a brewery, with two rival beer-running factions battling over their output. Buster lets himself be persuaded into the brewing business by the enterprising Durante because he has fallen in love with a girl he believes to be a society debutante, but who turns out to be the affinity of one of the beer running barons. And when the police raid their brewery, which is turning out 1,000 barrels a day, the comedians find themselves with the problem of getting rid of the evidence—which they do in a very novel way. The whole story is loaded with laughs and exciting episodes.

Celebrated Artists Perform

A musical interlude of importance forms a sequence of "Platinum Blonde," the Columbia comedy-drama, showing to-morrow at the Queen's Theatre. It represents a reception in a millionaire's mansion. Sol Cohen, noted violinist and concertmaster for Ruth St. Denis and other celebrated artists, and Joseph Diskay, Hungarian tenor, offer a brilliant Spanish selection in this scene. Incidentally this scene forms the background for a very dramatic interlude in the picture.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

Many players seem to have a secret dread of playing a four-card suit. Four-card suits play an all-important part in contract bridge to-day, and the handling of four-card suits is not difficult if you apply a few simple rules.

If you are in a game contract in a four-card suit, you will generally find that your partner holds four trump also, and this is an ideal distribution.

Here is one of the first rules to learn—establish your side suit before picking up the trump, unless the opponents will be unable to compel you to ruff a short suit and thereby shorten your own trump suit. To illustrate this point, let us take the following hand.

The Bidding

South and West passed. North, holding a four-card diamond suit and a four-card heart suit, should open the bidding with one diamond. This is the one time when you bid the lowest ranking suit first—when you have a four-card major and a four-card minor and are

 ♠ J-10-4 ♥ K-Q-J-7 ♦ A-J-10-6 ♣ A-6 	 NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH Dealer 	 ♠ A-8-6-3 ♥ 5-4 ♦ 9-4 ♣ K-Q-10-7-4
 ♠ 7-5 ♥ A-8-2 ♦ K-8 ♣ 9-5-3-2 		 ♠ K-Q-9-2 ♥ 10-9-6-3 ♦ Q-7-3 ♣ J-8

making an original bid in either third or fourth position.

East overcalled with two clubs. South had not enough strength to make a constructive bid, so he passed. West passed. North bid two hearts. South bid three hearts and North went to four hearts.

The Play

East's opening lead was the king of clubs which North, the declarer, won with the ace. Remember the first rule when playing a four-card suit is to establish the side suit.

The side suit in this hand is spades—but you do not establish the side suit if you are not afraid of exhausting your trumps by ruffing, and in this case you have only one club in each hand. Therefore, if the opponents try to force you to ruff, you will be able to trump in one hand and discard in the other.

Therefore, instead of starting your spade suit, you should immediately lead your hearts.

If you lead a spade, East will win with the ace and return a spade. Then, if you lead a trump, West will win with the ace. He will return a club back to East. Another spade will be led and West will trump and your contract will be defeated.

If you start the hearts you can quickly force West to win with his ace and then you will not get the spade ruff and will make your game.

SECRETARY OF STEAMSHIP COMPANY

DEATH OF MR. G. E. ELLAMS

His many friends will regret to learn that the death occurred at the Canossa Hospital yesterday, after an illness of over two months, of Mr. George Ernest Ellams, secretary of the Hongkong, Canton and Macao Steamship Co. Ltd.

Mr. Ellams, who was 44 years of age, was formerly of Singapore. He went to England towards the end of the Great War to join the Artillery Rifles, but the Armistice was signed before he got to France. He then joined the shipping firm of Messrs. Alfred Hoits, of Liverpool. Thirteen years ago he came to Hongkong as assistant secretary to the Hongkong, Canton and Macao Steamship Co. Ltd., and during the absence of Mr. J. Arnold, secretary, acted in that post. He was made secretary of the Company in 1932. He was a keen tennis player and golfer, and a racing enthusiast. Of a cheerful disposition, he will be greatly missed by the staff of the Steamship company, with whom he was extremely popular.

Mr. Ellams was unmarried, but leaves a sister in Liverpool and a brother.

The funeral takes place to-day, passing the Monument at 5.30 p.m.

NO EMPIRE CURRENCY

THE STERLING STANDARD

ONLY CANADA NOT IN LINE

London, July 18.

Replying to a question in Parliament, Mr. Hore Belisha, for the Chancellor of the Exchequer, said that no further proposals for an Empire currency or for the stabilisation of currency in the Empire were under consideration.

He recalled that at Ottawa the importance of maintaining the stability of exchange rates by countries within the Commonwealth whose currencies were linked with sterling was fully recognised.

Answering a supplementary question as to whether these questions would receive consideration while the Empire statesmen were in London for the World Conference, Mr. Hore Belisha said the best answer was that since Ottawa, South Africa has come on to the sterling standard, leaving Canada the only important part of the Empire not on sterling.—British Wireless.

A collision between a motor bus and a rickshaw occurred at the corner of Pedder Street and Queen's Road this morning. The bus was rounding the corner into Pedder Street and went into collision with the off-side wheel of the rickshaw. There was fortunately no fire in the rickshaw at the time. The wheel was badly damaged.

C.E.R. SALE TUSSLE

COUNT UCHIDA ASKED TO ASSIST

BUT REFUSES TO MEDIATE

Tokyo, July 19.

The conference supposed to be engaged in negotiations for the sale of the Chinese Eastern Railway by Russia to Manchukuo is making no noticeable headway.

Up to the present, it is gathered, the discussions have centred almost entirely upon the question of ownership, upon which the viewpoints of the Manchukuo delegates and those of the Soviet are widely divergent.

Manchukuo denies Soviet ownership as far as it concerns the chief assets of the C.E.R.

SPARRING?

It is possible, of course, that this is merely preliminary sparring and that it may eventually lead to the main tussle on the question of price.

It is reported that M. Yureneff, the principal Russian delegate, approached Count Uchida, Japanese Foreign Minister, and asked him to assist the conference in reaching a solution. He was told, however, that the time for mediation had not yet arrived.—Reuter.

An unemployed Chinese, charged by Sub-Inspector Elston before Mr. Wynne-Jones, at the Central Magistracy this morning, with having loitered in Hollywood Road for an unlawful purpose was sentenced to three months' imprisonment.

INDIRECT PROTECTION

BREAK UP OF THE CONFERENCE

MONETARY SNAGS

London, July 18.

The proposal that the Council of the League of Nations should, at its next session, fix the date of an International Diplomatic Conference of all importing and exporting countries concerned, was approved this afternoon by the Sub-Commission of the World Economic Conference on indirect protectionism. The proposal is being submitted to the Bureau.

The Sub-Commission on subsidies and bounties also adopted its drafting committee report which summarises the discussions and records the view points upon the question of direct and indirect subsidies, and particularly shipping subsidies.

The Report makes it clear that the prospects of reaching useful conclusions were largely affected by the opinion of many delegates that such must be conditional upon a monetary stabilisation.—British Wireless.

FINAL MEETINGS.

A full plenary meeting of the Economic Commission of the World Economic Conference will be held on Friday, and of the Monetary Commission on Monday.

The Bureau will meet on Tuesday and the final session of the full conference on Thursday, when six members of the leading delegations will speak on the results and the future of the conference.—British Wireless.
